L. A. Crim. No. —

IN THE MATTER OF THE APPLICATION OF MAJOR RAYMOND LISENBA FOR A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS—Filed October 31, 1939

To the Honorable William M. Waite, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of California, and to the Honorable Associate Justices Thereof:

The Petition of Major Raymond Lisenba respectfully shows:

I

That Major Raymond Lisenba is imprisoned, detained, confined and restricted of his liberty by Sheriff Eugene Biscailus at the County Jail in the County of Los Angeles, State of California, and is under a judgment to suffer the death penalty.

II

That on the 21st day of April, 1936, petitioner was lodged in the Los Angeles County Jail in the City of Los Angeles by Jack C. Southard and Charles Griffen, members of the staff of investigators of the office of the District Attorney of said county, who then and there claimed to and did act as agents of the State of California, but that at said time petitioner was not charged with any offense and was not booked for investigation;

[fol. 3] That on the 6th day of May, 1936, an indictment was returned in the Superior Court of said county by the grand jury of the County of Los Angeles, by which indictment petitioner was charged with the crime of murder, a felony;

That thereafter and on said 6th day of May, petitioner was duly arraigned in the Superior Court under said indictment;

That on the 11th day of May, 1936, petitioner was again duly arraigned on said charge and entered a plea of not guilty thereto;

That on the 22nd day of June, 1936, the defendant, represented by counsel, was placed on trial in Department 43 of said Superior Court, the Honorable Charles W. Fricke, Judge of said court presiding; that a jury was duly selected and impaneled; evidence was adduced on behalf of both the People and petitioner; arguments of counsel were made; the Court instructed the jury; and the jury, after deliberation, returned a verdict finding petitioner guilty of murder in the first degree;

That thereafter petitioner moved the Court for a new trial, which said motion was on the 10th day of September, 1936, denied;

That thereafter and on said 10th day of September, 1936, the Court pronounced judgment and sentenced petitioner to suffer the penalty of death;

That petitioner duly appealed from said judgment to the [fol. 4] Supreme Court of the State of California, and that on the 21st day of March, 1939, said Supreme Court of the State of California rendered its decision and judgment, by which judgment said judgment of the Superior Court was affirmed;

That thereafter petitioner duly moved the said Supreme Court to grant a rehearing of said appeal, and that on April 30th, 1939, said Supreme Court ordered that said appeal be reheard;

That thereafter and on the 5th day of October, 1939, said Supreme Court of the State of California rendered its judgment upon said appeal and ordered that said judgment of the Superior Court be affirmed.

III

That said imprisonment, detention, confinement and restriction, and judgment to take his life on the said charge of murder are illegal, and the illegality consists in this, to-wit:

1. That the jurisdiction of the Court and officers of the court was exceeded, in that the defendant was and is being held in violation of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and the said provision contained in Article I, Section 13 of the Constitution of the State of California, as will hereinafter appear in more particularity;

(a) That on the 19th day of April, 1936, petitioner was [fol. 5] forcibly taken from his home by Jack C. Southard and Charles Griffen and, without warrant or any process of law, and against petitioner's will and consent, was held and imprisoned in another house in said city; that for a period of thirteen days said Southard and Griffen, who were members of the staff of investigators of the Los Angeles County District Attorney's office, and other officers of that staff and other law enforcement officers, all officers of the State of California, and at least three deputies of said District Attorney's office, almost incessantly questioned petitioner, day and night, concerning the death of Mary Emma James, petitioner's deceased wife, and certain offenses which said officers and deputies accused petitioner with having committed; that during said period said officers, especially Southard and Griffen, repeatedly beat and otherwise assaulted petitioner, accused petitioner of having killed his said wife and of having tortured her and of other offenses punishable by life imprisonment or death, and threatened petitioner with further beatings unless he would admit his guilt of said act and offenses;

That during the first four days of said period petitioner was not permitted to sleep and did not sleep at all, and that during the remainder of said period petitioner was not permitted to sleep except during brief intervals between said questionings and was given little food, and that during the first seven days of said period, petitioner was not permitted to communicate with any person other than said officers [fol. 6] and said deputies and, in particular, was not permitted to see or consult with any attorney although petitioner at the beginning of said period and repeatedly thereafter, asked and begged of said Southard and Grifen and of other officers and of said deputies to be permitted to see an attorney; that at no time during said period had any criminal charge been placed against said petitioner by information, indictment or complaint; that during all of said questioning plaintiff denied that he had committed any of said acts or offenses with which he was so accused, as aforesaid, and petitioner avers that by reason of said treatment to which he was subjected, as above set forth, he was at all times physically weak and rendered mentally unfit, and that at the end of said period he was completely exhausted physically and mentally and in a state of complete discouragement and hopelessness and mental collapse.

(b) That Major Raymond Lisenba was unlawfully and forcibly taken from his, petitioner's, home; imprisoned and isolated in a private building for three nights and days before being lodged in any jail by law enforcement investigators of the District Attorney's office of said County, where he was held incommunicado, questioned continuously by officers, severely beaten and bruised, and was repeatedly falsely accused of having tortured and killed his wife and of other monstrous crimes which are punishable by life imprisonment or death, and threatened with further violence [fol. 7] to his person if he did not confess guilt of such accusations, all in violation of the due process provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(c) That he was forcibly and against his will and consent taken from said private building to the Los Angeles County Jail by said officers and there lodged and held practically incommunicado for eleven days, during which period he was almost incessantly questioned by said officers and by the deputies of the District Attorney of Los Angeles County; was on several occasions beaten by said officers; was repeatedly further accused of torturing and killing his wife, and of committing other crimes punishable by life imprisonment or death, and threatened with further personal violence if he continued to deny and would not admit that he was guilty of said charges; that during said eleven days he was repeatedly and forcibly taken from said jail by said officers to the office of the said District Attorney and there questioned and accused for many hours by said District Attorney, Burón Fitts, and Eugene Williams, Assistant District Attorney, and deputies of said District Attorney of said Los Angeles County, and that all of said acts and conduct of said officers and said District Attorney and his assistants and deputies were against the will and consent and protests of petitioner; that all of said detentions, movings from place to place and acts and conduct were in violation of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States which guarantees [fol. 8] to every person the equal protection of the laws of the land.

(d) That the repeated taking of petitioner from jail without his attorney and against his consent to the office of the District Attorney and other places and, without food and without rest, after prolonged questioning, thereafter extorting a purported confession, which was used in the trial against petitioner, was in violation of due process of law and petitioner's right to the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(e) That after your petitioner had been lodged in jail for four days he secured the services of Attorney S. J. Silverman, a duly licensed attorney-at-law, who was the counsel of his choice; that thereafter, on or about May 2nd, 1936, without his consent and against his will and without the knowledge or consent of his attorney, your petitioner was forcefully removed from the jail by Officer Southard and other officers, without any court order or other processes of law authorizing his removal from the jail, and was taken by said Southard to the office of the District Attorney of Los Angeles County.

(f) That after petitioner had secured the services of said S. J. Silverman, said Silverman was only permitted to consult with petitioner on one occasion. That without the knowledge or consent or permission of said Attorney Silver-
[fol. 9] man, and in violation of Section 1600 of the Penal Code of the State of California, regarding the removal of prisoners from jail, you petitioner was removed from the jail to the District Attorney's office and, without any notice to his said attorney and without his attorney being present, was subjected to prolonged interrogation by the District Attorney and Deputy District Attorneys and by officers of the State of California acting with the said prosecutors. That such procedure was and is in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and of petitioner's right to the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by said amendment.

(g) Petitioner was not, upon being taken into custody of said officers, taken to the nearest magistrate in the county, pursuant to Section 349 of the Penal Code, or to any magistrate, and no complaint or indictment was returned against him from April 21st, 1936, when he was first lodged in jail, or until May 6th, 1936, when an indictment was returned against him. That from April 19th, 1936, until the time of the return of the indictment he was never left alone and was almost constantly, from day to day, being removed from his jail cell and was subjected, without his consent and without any attorney being present, to repeated questioning. That this questioning was done not only by said officers of the law, but by the members of the District Attorney's staff, including the deputies who prosecuted the [fol. 10] case; that he was subjected to questioning without any knowledge or consent of his said attorney Silverman, and without said Silverman being present. That he was removed from the jail without any notice, knowledge or consent of the said attorney Silverman on or about May 2nd, 1936, at about 9:00 o'clock in the morning, taken to the District Attorney's office from the jail, and there subjected to questioning all day, without any food or rest, and without his attorney being present or notified; that said questioning continued until the next morning, when, in order to terminate the same, petitioner answered questions asked by the said officers and officials, all duly authorized agents of the State of California in charge of the prosecution of said case, as they wished him to answer said questions, and made a statement referred to herein as an alleged confession.

(h) That upon the trial of said cause said alleged confession by petitioner, which was a statement of alleged facts from which, if true, it appeared that petitioner confessed to having committed the offense with which he was charged in said indictment and admitted the commission of other criminal acts and offenses, was received in evidence over and against the objections of the petitioner that said statement was not shown to have been freely and voluntarily given and made, but was shown to have been given and made under duress, threats, force, fraud and coercion; that said statement was in fact given and made by petitioner under threats, duress and coercion and fraud, and not otherwise, and its [fol. 11] admission into evidence was a violation of the substantial rights of the petitioner to due process and the equal protection of the law, guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(i) That third-degree, brutal methods were used upon petitioner by said officers and deputies of said District Attorney to coerce and extort a purported confession from petitioner and that the use in evidence of such alleged confession so obtained by such means and methods as hereinbefore set forth make void the entire trial under the due process and equal protection of the laws clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(j) That prolonged questioning without sleep and under tortuous mental ordeal, similar to that employed in the dark ages, and in the torture chamber, were used upon the defendant, and statements thus extorted and coerced were permitted in evidence in the trial, as above set forth; that the use of the alleged confession in evidence obtained by these methods was in violation of the due process and equal protection of the laws clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(k) That alleged evidence of another purported offense in another state was presented in the trial of this case, without any complaint, indictment, information or judgment thereon and without any jurisdiction of the California Court of the subject-matter therein, and that said use of said testi- [fol. 12] mony placed the defendant upon trial in California before a California jury on such purported offense, and is in violation of due process of law, guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(l) That your petitioner was at no time ever accused by indictment, information, complaint or otherwise in the State of Colorado of the murder of his former wife, Winona P. James, who died in Colorado as the result of an automobile accident; that at the time of her death her father was at all times present and the official cause of her death which was entered at that time showed that her death was accidental and since that date no charge has been lodged against your petitioner in the State of Colorado. That without any charge or accusation, the State of California produced witnesses from the State of Colorado to testify in 1936 as to alleged occurrences in Colorado on September 21st, 1932, at Glen Cove, Colorado. That witnesses called were J. D. Rogers, Superintendent of Pikes Peak Highway; Miss Grace Yarnell, a cousin of petitioner's former wife; Gerald Rogers, who worked in a grocery store in Manitou Springs, Colorado; Dr. George B. Gilmore; Mrs. Irene F. Snyder; John A. McKelvey; G. A. Fries, connected with a Colorado Insurance Company; and Bayard Judd, from Kansas; and that the testimony of said witnesses was entirely insufficient to prove that petitioner was in any way connected with the death of said Winona P. James, but was sufficient to suggest [fol. 13] a conjecture or suspicion that he might have had some such connection and to prejudice the jury against petitioner.

That considerable time and much testimony during the trial was consumed with the trial of this issue of the alleged death of petitioner's former wife by other than natural means; that your petitioner never had any notice that he would be required to meet this charge and he had no opportunity to defend against it, for the reason that the processes of the State of California do not extend to the State of Colorado. That this testimony was introduced over the strenuous objection of your petitioner. That all of said testimony testified to in said trial and which is included in the transcript on appeal and is part of the records and files in the case, is made a part hereof by reference.

That the introduction of said evidence without any formal accusation and without any process of the Court to bring and produce witnesses from the State and vicinity in which it was claimed said other offense was committed, and in violation of the right to be tried on a criminal charge in the county in which the crime is alleged to have been committed only, was and is a violation of the guarantee of due process of law and the right to equal protection of the law contained in the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(m) That the principal evidence against the defendant was that of an alleged accomplice named Charles H. Hope; [fol. 14] that since the trial the said Charles H. Hope has made affidavits and filed the same in the Superior Court of Los Angeles County and has declared in said affidavits that his said testimony was obtained by deceit, fraud, collusion and coercion and was entirely false; that he was impelled only by force and fear, threats and promises to give said testimony, and that all these facts, including the falsity of his statements, were known to the prosecution and participated in by them; that said testimony thus obtained and the conviction based thereon makes the trial had herein a mere pretense and sham and a violation of the due process of law and right to the equal protection of the laws clauses and provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, by which provisions said rights are guaranteed petitioner.

(n) That during the trial of said cause the People caused two live, hissing rattlesnakes to be brought into the court room by investigators of said District Attorney's office, and to be exhibited to the jury, and said snakes were so brought in and exhibited, and did continually hiss and rattle while in said court room; that the actions, noises and presence of said snakes caused jurors to shrink, and they did shrink from said snakes and facially and otherwise expressed horror and fright; that neither of said snakes had been or were legally identified or connected in any way with the death of petitioner's said wife and that said procedure was so unwarranted and unprecedented, and so calculated to in[fol. 15] flame and prejudice the jury against petitioner and to distract their attention and minds from the issues on trial that thereby said trial became and was a mere pretense, mockery and sham, which violated the fundamental guarantee of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as well as the same provisions contained in Article I, Section 13 of the Constitution of California.

2. That by reason of the acts, omissions and use of evidence in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States which took place before and after the imprisonment of the said petitioner upon the said charge of murder, as above set forth the petitioner has become entitled to his discharge on the said charge of murder.

3. That the petitioner has been committed upon a criminal charge without reasonable or probable cause, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

In furtherance of said petition and as further grounds thereof, your petitioner respectfully shows:

That on or about April 19th, 1936, your petitioner was seized by officers of the law at about 9:00 o'clock in the morning and, without being incarcerated or placed in any jail, or taken before any magistrate, or allowed to call or [fol. 16] confer with any attorney at law, either of his own choosing or otherwise, kidnaped from his said home and forcibly carried away to a private residence on La Salle Avenue, next door to the home where petitioner lived, where your petitioner was subjected to a terrific beating by Jack Southard and Charles Griffen, acting as the agents of the State of California and under color of authority, and that your petitioner was ruptured during the night of April 21st, 1936, by reason of such beating then and there administered by said officers, and that thirteen or fourteen officers of the law, all agents of the State of California, continuously, and in relays, questioned your petitioner for approximately sixty (60) hours. That during this time your petitioner was continuously, unlawfully seized and held, and not placed in any proper or legal place of confinement, in violation of Sections 145 and 649 of the Penal Code of California, and Article I, Section 19 of the Constitution of California, and the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States and the same provisions contained and considered as due process of law in the State of California.

That during the entire period of time when your petitioner was being beaten and struck and interrogated, he was not permitted to have and did not have the services of any attorney or counsel at law; that your petitioner was beaten about the ears and body; that he was not allowed to sleep, but was constantly interrupted by officers of [fol. 17] the law until he finally became so exhausted that he could not keep his eyes open; that said course of conduct was cruel and inhuman and in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States; that he was ill from the beating which had been administered and he was sore and bruised about the body and exhausted mentally and physically;

That under the instructions of Officer J. S. Southard, an agent of the State of California, he was not left alone, even in jail, night or day, but was incessantly questioned from the moment when he was lodged in said jail until when, on the 2nd day of May, 1936, he was again removed from the jail against his will and without his consent and taken to the District Attorney's office and was there further questioned in relays by the State agents and members of the District Attorney's office and their said staff from early morning through the day, without being given anything to eat, until at 1:55 A. M., May 3rd, 1936, when, by reason of the constant and continuous torture and mental and physical violence to which he had been subjected, said alleged confession was extorted from him, as hereinbefore set forth;

That no attorney was present or permitted to be present during the said last mentioned interrogation; that your affiant was then represented by counsel to the then knowledge of said District Attorney and said other questioners, but his counsel was not notified; that thereafter the trial of the said cause commenced on June 22nd, 1936, and a jury [fol. 18] was regularly impaneled to try the cause; that the trial continued to and including July 24th, 1936;

That during the said trial of said action, over the objections of the petitioner and in violation of his rights guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States, the statements extorted from your petitioner under said brutal third-degree methods, which were then shown by the evidence to have been given under duress and not freely and voluntarily, were permitted to be placed before the jury, over strenuous objections of petitioner;

That on or about July 15th, 1936, two live, hissing rattlesnakes were brought into the court room and shown to the jury, as above set forth; that the top of the box containing the rattlesnakes was removed; that the court room at once became a bedlam of excitement; that the snakes were in a box which was carried down the aisle of the court room and that spectators rose from their seats and jurors immediately shrank and cowered in the jury box; that, although the snakes had not yet been placed in evidence the jurors had expressions of horror, fear and hatred in their faces, and moved uneasily in their seats in the jury box; that the snakes were placed on the counsel table, less than two feet away from the jury; that your petitioner is informed and believes that the effect of bringing said rattlesnakes into the court room was to so greatly excite their passions, prejudices and emotions that it caused said jury to believe petitioner guilty of the charge against him even before the evidence was all in; that such information is based upon [fol. 19] newspaper articles, quoting members of the jury:

The "Los Angeles Examiner" of July 25th, 1936, reads as follows:

"Harold W. Hart, one of said jurors, said:

" 'James had been convicted in my own mind ever since they brought the rattlesnakes into the court room, showed them to us and then introduced witnesses who told us that James had actually stuck his wife's foot into a box containing one of those serpents and had watched it strike her.'

"Mrs. Ollie Sype said:

" 'The sight of the rattlesnakes which were exhibited as the weapons by which Robert James did his wife to death stunned me. It was the most shocking experience of my life.'

"Harvey M. Gray said:

" 'I think that jurors should be governed by the preponderance of evidence in the doctrine of reasonable doubt. So far as I am concerned, the preponderance of the evidence was all to the prosecution'."

That thereafter, and during the course of the trial, evidence was introduced against your affiant, purporting to show that in the State of Colorado, at Colorado Springs, in September, 1932, petitioner purportedly killed Winona F. James, his then wife. That your petitioner was never accused of said crime in any information or indictment, nor did the State of California ever have any information or [fol. 20] indictment upon which to base said accusation; that petitioner was never given any notice of said last-named charge nor any opportunity to meet the first essentials of due process of law and was not informed that said charge would be made and attempted to be proved until the case was on trial and the People introduced the purported evidence relating to said other separate and distinct offense, of which the State had no jurisdiction. That the said purported evidence of the said other alleged offense upon which he was placed on trial consumed a great portion of the trial record; that it was introduced over petitioner's objection and without his consent and related to matters outside the jurisdiction of the Court, and the argument to the jury on said evidence and false issue consumed a large portion of the time in the discussion of the case, all in violation of the rights of your petitioner, guaranteed to him by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

That thereafter one Charles H. Hope was called as a witness; that he entered a plea of guilty to the charge against himself and your petitioner. That the sentence against the said Hope was delayed until after the trial of your petitioner and that immediately thereafter he was given a life sentence. That the said Hope testified against your petitioner, as appears more specifically in the reporter's transcript on file in the Supreme Court of the State of California, which is made a part of this petition by reference.

That thereafter, on or about the 25th day of June, 1939, [fol. 21] the said Charles H. Hope filed with the Clerk of the Superior Court of the State of California, Los Angeles County, two (2) affidavits, made a part herein by reference as though here fully set forth, in both of which he repudiated said statements and declared that through the collusion of State prosecuting officers he was prevailed upon to give and did give false testimony against your petitioner and that said State officials knew the said testimony to be false, and that they did so with corrupt motive and purpose and of supplying defects in the evidence. That a fraud was perpetuated upon the Court by reason of his testimony and that there was nothing to his snake story, and that the same was a creation of the District Attorney's staff.

That the said Charles H. Hope so testified both out of fear and out of promises made to him; that each and every one of the above proceedings set forth were and are in violation of the constitutional rights guaranteed to your petitioner under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and that the proceedings had, as above set forth, vitiated the verdict and judgment rendered in said cause and case on a charge of murder, and that therefore your petitioner is held illegally on said charge of murder and the entire proceedings were and are void and without warrant or authority of law.

Petitioner avers that the laws and the Constitution of the State of California prohibit the introduction into evi- [fol. 22] dence of the confession of one accused of crime, unless it first is shown to have been freely and voluntarily made; said laws prohibit and penalize brutal treatment of persons in the custody of peace officers by said peace officers;

Said laws require that an officer, upon making an arrest without a warrant shall, without unnecessary delay, take the arrested person before the nearest and most accessible magistrate; that there was no reason why said officers should not have taken petitioner before a magistrate forthwith upon his first having been taken into the custody of said Southard and Griffen, as aforesaid;

Said laws and Constitution provide that a person accused of crime shall have the right to the benefit of counsel at all stages of the criminal proceeding;

Said laws require that when a person who is accused of crime has counsel proper notice and opportunity to be present shall be given such counsel at all stages of such criminal proceedings at which the accused is required to be present;

Said laws prohibit and penalize the kidnaping of any person, whether by a peace officer or by any other individual; and that each and all of said laws have been and are universally recognized and enforced by the courts of the State of California, and that all persons within the State of California are universally given the protection of said laws, and of each of them, by said courts and by other officers and agents of said state, except, when as in the [fol. 23] instant case, peace officers and agents of said state, upon rare occasions, by reason of violent prejudice and passion, violate said Constitution and laws and refuse to give some person accused of crime the protection thereof.

That the said officers and other agents of the State herein named have denied to petitioner the protection of each and all of the laws and constitutional guarantees above specified, as hereinabove set forth.

That all constitutional provisions, laws and judicial decisions of the State of California are incorporated in this petition by reference and made a part hereof, as though fully set forth herein, and petitioner refers in particular to the following sections of the Constitution and of the Penal Code of the State of California, and incorporates each of said sections herein by reference as though fully quoted and set forth in this petition:

Article I, Sections 5, 11, 13 and 19 of the Constitution of California;

Sections 145, 146, 147, 149, 207, 208, 821, 824, 849, 859, 1597 and 1600 of the Penal Code of said State.

That no other application for a Writ of Habeas Corpus has been made by or on behalf of petitioner for the reason that this entire cause is now in the Supreme Court of the State of California on a Petition for Rehearing. That this Court has before it the entire records, files and exhibits in [fol. 24] the said case, and that each and every part of the testimony of all the witnesses, exhibits, files, records and affidavits presented on the trial of said case are made a part of this petition by reference, as though herein fully set forth.

That the Constitution of California confers original jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of California to issue Writs of Habeas Corpus. (Article VI, Sec. 4, Constitution of California.)

Wherefore, your petitioner prays that a Writ of Habeas Corpus may be granted, directed to the said Sheriff, Eugene Biscailuz, commanding him to have the body of said Major Raymond Lisenba before said Court at a time and place to be specified, to do and receive what shall then and there be considered by said Court, concerning Major Raymond Lisenba, together with the time and cause of his detention and said writ; and that he may be released from confinement under said judgment of murder.

Major Raymond Lisenba, Petitioner. Morris Lavine, Attorney for Petitioner.

[fol. 25] POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; and Article I, Section 13 of the Constitution of the State of California.

Convictions of murder resting upon confessions shown to have been extorted by officers of the State by torture of the accused are void under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and vitiate the verdict.

Brown v. Mississippi, 297 U. S. 278.

To deprive a human being of sleep is a form of torture not less severe than physical violence.

Kiang Sun Wan v. U. S., 266 U. S. 1; 69 L. Ed. 131.

A confession so obtained vitiates the verdict.

Rounds v. State, 106 S. W. (2d) 212;
People v. Dye, 119 Cal. App. 262.

A conviction obtained by perjured testimony is void under the due process clause under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103.

[fol. 26] Where falsity of perjured testimony upon which conviction is obtained is discovered after the conviction, as well as where the testimony was known to be perjured when presented, the State must afford corrective judicial process under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Jones v. Commonwealth of Ky., 97 Fed. (2d) 335.
Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103.

The inhibition contained in the Fourteenth Amendment has exclusive reference to State action and means that no officer or agent by whom its powers are exerted shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339.

Said guaranty was aimed at hostile discrimination, oppression and inequality.

Truax v. Corrigan, 257 U. S. 312.

In such cases the Writ of Habeas Corpus will lie to determine the validity of the conviction.

Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103.
Jones v. Commonwealth of Ky., 97 Fed. (2d) 333.

The State may not hurry an accused to conviction under [fol. 27] mob domination where the whole proceeding is but a mask without supplying corrective process.

Moore v. Dempsey, 261 U. S. 86, 91.

The bringing in of rattlesnakes to the court room substituted fear domination similar to that of a mob and made the whole proceedings but a mask and pretense of a trial.

PETITION FOR APPEAL—Filed January 18, 1940

Aggrieved by the final decision of the Supreme Court of the State of California rendered on November 9th, 1939, denying your petitioner an application for a writ of habeas corpus, appellant Major Raymond Lisenba (Robert S. James) hereby prays that an appeal be allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States herein, and for an order permitting the said appellant for leave to proceed in forma pauperis, and that said order, in lieu of a bond, act as a supersedeas.

[Title omitted]

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS—Filed January 18, 1940

The said appellant Major Raymond Lisenba assigns the following errors in the record and proceedings in said case:

I

The Supreme Court of the State of California in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment of the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant erred in holding that the said Major Raymond Lisenba was not denied due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in having live, hissing rattlesnakes brought into the court room during the trial of the said case, and the said Supreme Court erred in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment that the said bringing of rattlesnakes into the court room during the trial of the said case, by agents of the State of California, and exhibiting them less than two feet from the jury, did not and does not violate due process of law and equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 40] II

The Supreme Court of the State of California in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment of the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant erred in holding that the right of Major Raymond Lisenba to the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States was not violated when live, hissing rattlesnakes were brought into and kept in the court room during the trial of said case and were exhibited to the jury within less than two feet from where the jurors sat.

III

The Supreme Court of the State of California, in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment of the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant, erred in holding that the arrest of the appellant on the 19th day of April, 1936, and the forcible taking of him from his home by agents and officers of the State of California without warrant or any process of law, and against appellant's will and consent, and that the incessant and uninterrupted questioning of appellant for three days and nights by agents and officers of the State of California, during which he was repeatedly accused of numerous acts of a highly criminal nature, including the torture and killing of his wife, Mary [fol. 41] Emma James, and the almost incessant questioning of appellant for a period of nine days immediately thereafter, during which the accusations above mentioned were continually repeated, all of said questioning having relation to said accusations, and immediately preceding and leading to statements made by appellant in the form of a purported confession of the truth of said accusations, and which said questionings were several times interrupted by said officers brutally beating and otherwise assaulting and seriously injuring appellant's person,—said questionings and beatings having occurred while appellant was being held and imprisoned by said officers, without warrant or any process of law, for the first three nights and days without any sleep, in a private house, and for the remaining nine days in a public jail and with only brief intervals of sleep between said questionings, all without appellant's consent, and the final taking of appellant to the office of the District Attorney, against appellant's will and without any lawful or other process, and being there further questioned by the District Attorney and his deputies for approximately two hours, without food or sleep and without benefit of appellant's counsel, and the extorting from appellant through said acts, questionings and procedure of statements in the form of and purporting to be a confession of guilt, which statements were introduced in evidence during the trial of this case against appellant's objections, and which statements appellant made [fol. 42] only to terminate the ordeal to which he had been subjected for thirteen days, does not violate due process in this prosecution guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the constitution of the United States.

IV

The Supreme Court of the State of California in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment of the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant erred in holding that appellant was not denied the right to the equal protection of the laws when a purported confession was admitted in evidence, where it was shown that appellant had been, for a period of thirteen days, threatened, assaulted, deprived of sleep or substantial food, and almost continuously accused of numerous crimes, and questioned concerning them by investigators of the District Attorney, the District Attorney and his deputies, when, during the first three days of said period appellant was held incommunicado in a private house, was beaten by official investigators of the District Attorney, was given no food, and was continuously questioned by relays of official investigators and Deputy District Attorneys, as well as by the District Attorney; when, during the last nine days of said period appellant was lodged in jail, was beaten repeatedly and otherwise assaulted, was given little food and allowed to sleep only for brief periods between questionings, was almost continuously questioned and threatened by official in- [fol. 43] vestigators and other law enforcement officers, was allowed to see counsel but once, and held otherwise incommunicado for the first eleven days of said period, and when, at the end of said thirteen days appellant was in a state of fright and physical collapse and was mentally and physically exhausted, he was taken by official investigators of the District Attorney's office to the District Attorney's office and there questioned and threatened by the District Attorney and his deputies for several hours, following which the alleged confession was purportedly taken by a deputy sheriff from appellant,—although appellant had continuously, during said period of thirteen days, maintained his innocence, and when the purported confession was taken by a deputy sheriff from appellant only as the result of said ordeal of thirteen days duration and of appellant's fright, and weakened physical and mental condition, and was thereafter repudiated and has been made to no other person since then.

V

The Supreme Court of the State of California in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment of the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant erred in holding that the arrest of appellant without warrant or preferment of any charge; the forcible holding of appellant incommunicado in a private house by peace officers, and the failure of said officers to take appellant before a magistrate, as provided by the laws of the State of California, immedi- [fol. 44] ately upon his arrest, and thereafter placing and for nine days holding appellant in jail without the preferment of a criminal charge against him; the refusal of permission to appellant to consult or see counsel for eleven days after such arrest and incarceration; the frequent beating and the continual questioning and threatening of appellant for thirteen days; the taking of appellant, several times, from jail, against his will, to other places for questioning; the deprivation of appellant of sleep and substantial food for thirteen days; the refusal to call appellant's known counsel when appellant was finally questioned and coerced, and admission of such purported confession into evidence against appellant,—was not a violation of appellant's right to the equal protection of the laws as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

VI

The Supreme Court of the State of California erred in its opinion, decision, determinaation and judgment in the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant, in holding that this appellant was no denied due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States when he was placed upon trial in California on the charge of murder of his wife Mary Emma James, and thereafter, during the trial of said case, without any indictment, information or judgment, the defendant was tried on evidence from the State of Colorado [fol. 45] regarding the death of his former wife, Winona P. James, and which evidence was offered to show that appellant had committed criminal offenses in Colorado, of which he never was accused and of which appellant had no notice and could not have the use of legal process to secure any witnesses to rebut or refute the testimony so given, and that such trial in California on evidence from Colorado, was not in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

VII

The Supreme Court of the State of California erred in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment in the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant, in holding that the right of this appellant to the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States was not violated when he was placed upon trial in California on the charge of murder of his wife Mary Emma James, in California, and thereafter, during the trial of said case, without any indictment, information or judgment, the defendant was tried on evidence from the State of Colorado regarding the death of his former wife, Winona P. James, and which evidence was offered to show that appellant had committed criminal offenses in Colorado, of which he never was accused and of which appellant had no notice and could not have the use of legal process to secure any witnesses [fol. 46] to rebut or refute the testimony so given.

VIII

The Supreme Court of the State of California, in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment in the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant, erred in holding that appellant was not denied due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, when he was deprived of the right of his counsel at any interrogation conducted of him; when he asked to have his counsel present, and without his consent he was removed from the jail without his attorney's having been sent for or being present and subjected to prolonged and constant questioning, and when statements thus purportedly obtained were permitted to be used in evidence against him.

The Supreme Court of the State of California erred in holding that such proceedings did not violate due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and did not vitiate the verdict.

IX

The Supreme Court of the State of California, in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment in the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant, erred in holding that the right of appellant to the equal protection of the laws as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States was not vio- [fol. 47] lated when he was deprived of the right of his counsel at any interrogation conducted of him, although, to the then knowledge of the District Attorney, he had retained counsel; when he asked to have his counsel present, and without his consent he was removed from the jail, and without his attorney's having been sent for or being present he was subjected to prolonged and constant questioning, and when statements thus obtained in order to terminate the questioning were permitted to be used in evidence against him.

The Supreme Court of the State of California erred in holding that such proceedings did not deprive appellant of the equal protection of the laws as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and did not vitiate the verdict.

X

The Supreme Court of the State of California, in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment in the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant, erred in holding that appellant was not deprived of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and in holding that the conviction, sentence and judgment pronounced herein is not void when said conviction was based principally upon the testimony of an alleged accomplice named Charles H. Hope, without whose testimony such conviction could not have occurred, and in refusing to consider the affidavits of said [fol. 48] Charles H. Hope made since the trial of said cause and filed with the Supreme Court of the State of California in connection with these proceedings, in which said Hope swears that his testimony was obtained by fraud, collusion and coercion and was entirely false, and that he was impelled only by force, fear, threats and promises to give such testimony, and that all of these facts, including the falsity of his statements, were known to the prosecution and participated in by them; and the Supreme Court of the State of California erred in holding that said testimony thus obtained, and the conviction based thereon, did not make the trial had therein a mere pretense and sham, and was not a violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The Supreme Court of the State of California further erred in holding that a prosecution and conviction based upon testimony induced by threats that said Hope would be framed unless he gave such testimony, and by coercive treatment on the part of the prosecutor and members of his official investigating staff, and by promises of leniency to said Hope and favors to his family made by the District Attorney and his deputies, when said Hope avers by affidavits filed with the California Supreme Court in these proceedings, which affidavits were not contradicted, controverted or traversed in any manner, that such testimony was entirely false and such falsity was known to the District Attorney and his deputies when given by said Hope, did not violate due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth [fol. 49] Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

XI

The Supreme Court of the State of California, in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment in the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant, erred in holding that the right of appellant to the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States was not violated, and in holding that the conviction sentence and judgment herein pronounced is not void, when said conviction was based principally upon the testimony of an alleged accomplice named Charles H. Hope, without whose testimony such conviction could not have occurred, and in refusing to consider the affidavits of said Charles H. Hope, made since the trial of said cause and uncontradicted and not traversed in any manner, in which said Hope swears that his testimony was obtained by fraud, collusion and coercion and was entirely false, and that he was impelled only by force, fear, threats and promises to give such testimony, and that all of these facts, including the falsity of his statements, were known to the prosecution and participated in by them: and the Supreme Court of the State of California erred in holding that said testimony thus obtained, and the conviction based thereon, did not make the trial had therein a mere pretense and sham and did not deprive appellant of the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the [fol. 50] United States.

The Supreme Court of the State of California further erred in holding that a prosecution and conviction based upon testimony induced by threats that said Hope would be framed unless he gave such testimony, and by coercive treatment on the part of the prosecutor and members of his official investigating staff, and by promises of leniency to said Hope and favors to his family made by the District Attorney and his deputies, when such testimony was entirely false and such falsity was known to the District Attorney and his deputies, did not deprive appellant of the equal protection of the laws as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

XI

The Supreme Court of the State of California, in its opinion, decision, determination and judgment in the case of the People of the State of California v. this appellant, erred in holding that each and all of the above acts did not and do not constitute a denial to appellant of the equal protection of the laws as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and did not and do not deprive appellant of due process of law as guaranteed by said Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

For which errors the appellant prays that the said judg- [fol. 51] ment of the Supreme Court of the State of California dated November 9th, 1939, denying appellant's Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus in the above-entitled cause, be reversed, and a judgment rendered in favor of the said appellant and for costs.

CERTIFICATE OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF CALIFORNIA—Filed January 18, 1940

This is to certify that a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus was filed in the Supreme Court of the State of California on October 31st, 1939, on behalf of Major Raymond Lisenba, also known as Robert S. James; that the said Petitioner is the same Major Raymond Lisenba, also known as Robert S. James, who is the appellant vs. The People of the State of California, appellee, in the appeal taken and allowed from the judgment of this Court in the case of The People of the State of California vs. Major Raymond Lisenba, also known as Robert S. James.

The Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus was based upon all the records, files and proceedings in the trial and subsequent to the trial in the case of the People of the State of California vs. Major Raymond Lisenba, also known as Robert S. James, and upon certified copies of two affidavits of Charles H. Hope, the originals of which were filed in the Superior Court and the certified copies of which were filed in this Court in said cases since the judgment of conviction and sentence imposed therein. The Petition for Writ of [fol. 65] Habeas Corpus was considered upon all records, files and proceedings in the trial and subsequent to the trial in said cases.

This is further to certify that the said Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus set forth as grounds for the granting of the same that the petitioner is under judgment of death in violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States, to-wit, the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in this:

1. That the bringing of live, hissing rattlesnakes into the court room during the trial and exhibiting them and exposing them to the jury was so inflam-atory and frightening in its nature as to make of the trial based upon the murder of the deceased, Mary Emma James, by drowning, a mock and a sham, and violated the fundamental guarantee of due process of law contained in the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States;

2. That brutal, third degree methods were used upon the defendant Lisenba to coerce and extort a purported confession, and that the use in evidence of such alleged confession obtained by such means and methods makes void the entire trial under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States;

3. That prolonged questioning without sleep and under a tortuous mental ordeal similar to that employed in the dark ages and in the torture chamber, were used upon defendant, and statements thus extorted and coerced were used in [fol. 66] evidence at the trial; that the use of the alleged confession thus obtained by these methods, in evidence, makes void the entire trial under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States;

4. That alleged evidence of another purported offense in another state, to-wit, Colorado, was presented in the trial of this case without any indictment, information or judgment thereon, and without any jurisdiction of the California courts of the subject-matter therein, and without the existence of any processes of the California courts to reach any witnesses in Colorado, and that said use of said testimony placed the defendant upon trial in California by a California jury on such purported offense, and was and is in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States;

5. That Major Raymond Lisenba was unlawfully imprisoned and isolated in a private building for three days and nights before being lodged in jail: that he was then held practically incommunicado for eleven days and almost incessantly questioned by officers until the alleged confession was given, and that the use of said alleged confession as evidence in the trial was in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States;

6. That the repeated taking of defendant from jail without his attorney and against his consent, to the District [fol. 67] Attorney's office and other places, after prolonged questioning without food and without rest, and thereafter extorting a purported confession which was never repeated before or since, and which was claimed to have been taken by a deputy sheriff in the presence of the District Attorney and in the absence of defendant's counsel, and the use thereof as evidence in this case against appellant, was in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States;

7. That said Major Raymond Lisenba was deprived of the right of counsel during these stages of the proceedings and was denied the request that his counsel be present; that Petitioner was denied the right of consultation with, or the presence of an attorney during all of the period subsequent to his kidnaping by peace officers and while he was incarcerated in a private home and thereafter in jail, and during the continuous questioning to which he was subjected, and in particular on the occasion when said alleged confession was extorted from him, as aforesaid, although petitioner repeatedly asked to be permitted to have counsel present;

8. That the principal evidence against the defendant was that of an alleged accomplice named Charles H. Hope; that since the trial of appellant the said Hope has made affidavits and filed the same in the Superior Court of Los Angeles County and certified copies of the same have been filed in the Supreme Court of California and considered by this [fol. 68] Court in connection with this petition, stating that said Hope's testimony was obtained by deceit, fraud, collusion and coercion, and was entirely false, and that he was impelled by force and fear, threats and promises, to testify as he did, and that all these facts, including the falsity of his statements, were known to the prosecution and participated in by them, which said affidavits of said Hope, and statements therein contained, were undisputed and not traversed in any manner; that testimony thus obtained and a conviction based thereon, makes a trial a mere pretense and is in violation of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

9. That each and all of these things violated appellant's right of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

That on November 9th, 1939, the Supreme Court of California entertained the petition and considered each of the contentions made upon each of the grounds specifically set forth, and duly and regularly and explicitly overruled each and every one of the contentions made by the appellant Major Raymond Lisenba, that his rights of due process of law and equal protection of the laws under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States were infringed, and the denial of appellant's petition for hearing [fol. 69] on said writ is to be interpreted and considered as holding against appellant's contentions that his rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States upon each of the grounds set forth were violated.

That on the 18th day of January, 1940, a petition for appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from the judgment of this Court having been duly and regularly presented, and good cause appearing therefor, the same was allowed.

It is ordered that this certificate be filed in this Court and made a part of the record on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

STIPULATION—Filed May 4, 1940

It is Stipulated by and between the People of the State of California, through Earl Warren, Attorney General, by Warren I. Proud, Deputy Attorney General, and Morris Lavine, attorney for Major Raymond Lisenba, that the record in the case of Major Raymond Lisenba, also known as Robert S. James, vs. The People of the State of California, on appeal from the judgment of the Supreme Court of California to the Supreme Court of the United States, shall also be considered the record on appeal in the matter of Major Raymond Lisenba, also known as Robert S. James, for a Writ of Habeas Corpus, for which an appeal was allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and that the records in the case of Major Raymond Lisenba, also known as Robert S. James, vs. The People of the State of California on an appeal from the judgment, and all exhibits, [fols. 103-108] files and documents in that case may be deemed to be a part of the record in the habeas corpus proceedings by reference.

STATEMENT OF POINTS UPON WHICH APPELLANT INTENDS TO RELY AND DESIGNATION OF PORTIONS OF THE RECORD TO BE PRINTED—Filed June 22, 1940

[Stamp:] Received copy of within document, Jun. 20, 1940. Earl Warren, Attorney General by Frank Richards, Deputy.

[fol. 109a] To the Honorable Supreme Court of the United States:

In compliance with paragraph 9 of Rule 13, Rules of the United States Supreme Court, appellant intends to rely upon the following points and grounds:

I

That third degree brutal methods were used upon the petitioner to coerce and extort a purported confession which was used in evidence against him, and that such use of such alleged confession obtained by such means and methods make void the entire trial under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

II

That third degree brutal methods used upon petitioner to coerce and extort a purported confession from him and the use thereof in the trial denied to petitioner the equal [fol. 109b] protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

III

That prolonged questioning without sleep and under tortuous mental ordeal, similar to that employed in the dark ages, and in the torture chamber, were used upon the petitioner and statements thus extorted and coerced were permitted in evidence in the trial. That the use of such alleged confession in evidence obtained by these methods was in violation of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

IV

That prolonged questioning without sleep and under tortuous mental ordeal, similar to that employed in the dark ages, and in the torture chamber, were used upon the petitioner and statements thus extorted and coerced and used against petitioner in his trial denied petitioner the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

That Major Raymond L enba was unlawfully imprisoned and isolated in a private uilding for three nights and days, before being lodged in any jail; that he was then held practically incommunicado for eleven days, and almost inces-[fol. 109c] santly questioned by officers until the alleged confession was given, and that the use thereof in evidence in the trial was in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

VI

That Major Raymond Lisenba was unlawfully imprisoned and isolated in a private building for three nights and days, before being lodged in any jail; that he was then held practically incommunicado for eleven days, and almost incessantly questioned by officers until the alleged confession was given, and that the use thereof in evidence in the trial denied petitioner the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

VII

That the repeated taking of defendant Lisenba from jail without his attorney and against his consent and to the office of the district attorney and other places and after prolonged questioning without food and without rest, and thereafter extorting a purported confession which was used in the case against appellant, was in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 109d] VIII

That the repeated taking of defendant Lisenba from jail without his attorney and against his consent and to the office of the district attorney and other places and after prolonged questioning without food and without rest, and thereafter extorting a purported confession which was used in the case against appellant, denied petitioner the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

IX

That the principal evidence against the defendant was that of an alleged accomplice named Charles H. Hope. That since the trial the said Charles H. Hope has made affidavits and filed the same in the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, stating that his testimony was obtained by deceit, fraud, collusion and coercion and was entirely false; that he was impelled by force and fear, threats and promises and that all these facts, including the falsity of his statements, were known to the prosecution and participated in by them. That testimony thus obtained and the conviction based thereon make a trial a mere pretense and are all in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

X

That the principal evidence against the defendant was that of an alleged accomplice named Charles H. Hope. That since the trial the said Charles H. Hope has made affidavits and filed the same in the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, stating that his testimony was obtained by deceit, fraud, collusion and coercion and was entirely false; that he was impelled by force and fear, threats and promises and that all these facts, including the falsity of his statements, were known to the prosecution and participated in by them. That testimony thus obtained and the conviction based thereon make a trial a mere pretense and denied to the petitioner the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

XI

That the bringing of live, hissing rattlesnakes into a courtroom and exhibiting them to a jury was so inflammatory and frightening in its nature as to make of the trial a mock and sham and violate the fundamental guarantee of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

XII

That the bringing of live, hissing rattlesnakes into a [fol. 109f] courtroom and exhibiting them to a jury was so inflammatory and frightening in its nature as to make of the trial a mock and sham, and denied to the petitioner a fair and impartial trial guaranteed to all citizens of the United States as a part of the guarantee of the equal protection of the laws under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Appellant designates the following portions of the record to be printed:

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1940

No. 134

MAJOR RAYMOND LISENBA (ROBERT S. JAMES),
Appellant,

vs.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, Appellee.

STATEMENT OF JURISDICTION ON APPEAL.

(On Habeas Corpus)

In compliance with Rule 12, appellant herewith presents his statement of jurisdiction on appeal.

A.

The statutory provisions which sustain jurisdiction are Section 237 Judicial Code (28 U. S. C. A. 344) as amended by Act of January 31, 1928, Chapter 14, 45 Stat. 54, and Act of April 26, 1928, Chapter 440, 45 Stat. 466.

B.

The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States is involved in said decision, and reads as follows:

> "Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

C.

The judgment in said case was rendered by the Supreme Court of California on November 9th, 1939. An application for appeal was presented to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California on December 18th, 1939, and allowed on that date to the Supreme Court of the United States.

D.

Nature of Case and Rulings Below.

The appellant is sentenced to death. His conviction and sentence resulted from a purported trial which was a mock and a sham, and therefore in violation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Moore v. Dempsey, 261 U. S. 86;
Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103;
Snyder v. Mass., 291 U. S. 97, 122.

The petitioner herein was charged with the murder of his wife, Mary Emma James, in California. It was alleged that she died of drowning.

Two live, hissing rattlesnakes, terrifying in their nature—a horrifying spectacle—were exposed before the jury and created such a state of fright in their minds as to bring in a death penalty verdict through passion and prejudice, and not in accordance with due process of law. Against the terrifying nature of these rattlesnakes exhibited to the women and men on the jury, appellant had no fair opportunity to defend.

Another proceeding in the trial which deprived the petitioner herein of a fair trial guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, was the fact that during the trial of the case the appellee, People of the State of California, produced witnesses from the State of Colorado and presented evidence without any accusation ever having been lodged in Colorado, and without any proof or notice in advance that the People were to produce said testimony, that appellant had been responsible for the death of a former wife in Colorado in 1932. Appellant was without the process of any court, or without legal means to defend against the charges thus brought in California for the first time and placed before the California jury against him.

Statements purported to have been obtained from appellant by third degree methods were also introduced into the trial of the case, and grave abuses of the criminal processes and the deprivation of counsel to appellant at the time he was being questioned, in violation of his rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, also occurred.

The case was duly appealed to the Supreme Court of California. While said case was under appeal an alleged accomplice named Charles H. Hope, upon whose testimony the trial was principally based, repudiated his testimony and made affidavits that his testimony was false and was known to the prosecutor to be false. These affidavits were filed with the Supreme Court as a part of that proceeding and also this proceeding. The Supreme Court declined to entertain and consider said affidavits.

The judgment was affirmed on appeal by the Supreme Court of California, with a vigorous dissenting opinion by Mr. Justice Seawell, concurred in by Mr. Justice Curtis (89 P. (2d) 39). Upon rehearing the opinion was also concurred in by Mr. Justice Houser. An appeal was allowed in said case by the Supreme Court of California to the Supreme Court of the United States.

In order to present and exhaust all our State remedies, petitioner herein presented a petition for writ of habeas corpus, pursuant to the constitution and statutes of California, to the Supreme Court of the State of California on October 31, 1939, said petition setting forth the grounds that petitioner's rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States had each been violated by the procedure and proceedings which took place in the trial of said case. Said petition was considered by the Supreme Court on November 9th, 1939, and denied, and an appeal was allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States by Chief Justice William H. Waste on January 18th, 1940.

Quoting from the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Seawell of the Supreme Court of California in People v. Lisenba, 97 Cal. Dec. 467 (89 P. (2d) 39) it is stated:

> "The affidavits of R. E. Parsons and Wm. J. Clark, Esqs., defendant's attorneys, aver various acts of misconduct. They are predicated in the main on the dramatic manner in which two live rattlesnakes were brought into the courtroom in a glass-covered box some five feet in length and placed in front of the jury. The snakes as carried down the aisle shook their rattles furiously. It is not necessary to describe the consternation into which the crowded courtroom was thrown. There are some things of which the court will take judicial knowledge and this is one. The inside of the box contained smears of venom where the snakes had struck the sides of the box. This was called to the attention of the jury. The averments are that spectators rose to their feet, some gasped from nervous fear and persons nearest the aisles shrank away. Many uttered audible exclamations of fright. Counsel incorporates in his affidavit as descriptive of the scene the following account taken from the 'Los Angeles Herald Express,' a newspaper of large circulation:

"'Buzzing their hollow rattles so loudly that women in the crowded courtroom shivered and shuddered at the eerie, frightening sounds, two diamond-backed rattlesnakes glittering in their new skins today were placed on the counsel table in Superior Charles W. Fricke's court where Robert S. James, Birmingham barber, crouched ghost-faced and jittery at his trial for the murder of his golden-haired bride, Mary.

"'Paraded across the courtroom in a velvet covered venom splashed 5-foot glass cage, two deadly diamond-back rattlesnakes late today hissed and shook their hollow rattles eerily and struck out with their evil wedge-shaped heads as they were exhibited less than 2 feet away before the fascinated eyes of 10 men and 2 women who make up the jury trying Robert S. James for the murder of his golden-haired wife, Mary.'"

The "Los Angeles Examiner," another newspaper of wide circulation in Los Angeles, made the following comment:

"Men's enemy from primordial ages, the snake, yesterday was made the living, visible symbol of the Robert James murder case. Two diamond-backed rattlesnakes hissed and struck before the trial jury as a long glass box was borne forward like a hideous offering of a black ritual."

The jury was allowed to go at large, and was subjected to the constant onslaught of prejudicial and sensational news articles of a highly prejudicial character, which as pointed out in Justice Seawell's dissenting opinion, concurred in by Justice Curtis and Justice Houser, "was unquestionably communicated to the jury in every form of modern news transmission."

The bringing in of live, venomous snakes before the jury and the exhibition of a dead snake enclosed in a glass jar, with open mouth and fangs projecting from the upper jaw, was violently objected to in the trial of the case when first brought in, said objections being overruled. Thereafter, on appeal in the Supreme Court of California, which takes over death penalty cases, the majority opinion held it was proper to bring live snakes into the courtroom while the dissenting opinion held:

> "What aid the two live rattlesnakes which were brought into the courtroom, rattling and writhing, and thus exhibited to the jury in determining the cause of death on any theory, does not appear from a painstaking examination of the entire transcript of the proceedings, and we feel satisfied that the spectacular exhibition of the rattlesnakes, in the circumstances to be hereafter noted, unquestionably constituted prejudicial error."

We contend that such a proceeding is not a trial but a mask of a trial wherein appellant was hurried to conviction, and where, just as in Moore v. Dempsey, 261 U. S. 86 "counsel, court and jury were swept to the fatal end by an irresistible wave of passion and prejudice, so that no trial in a true sense was afforded."

That third degree brutal methods, both in the form of physical violence, and in the deprivation to appellant of sleep and rest, were used upon him to coerce and extort a purported confession, and that the use in evidence of such purported confession obtained by such means and methods make void the entire trial under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. (Brown v. Mississippi, 297 U. S. 278; Jones v. Commonwealth, 97 F. (2d) 333.)

The details of the procedure are clearly described by Justice Seawell, in his dissenting opinion, concurred in by Justice Curtis, and on a rehearing by Justices Houser and Curtis, as follows:

> "On Sunday morning, April 19th, James was taken from his home at 3886 La Salle Avenue by Southard, Griffen and Dean, investigators, to a private house next door, 3882 La Salle Avenue, occupied by officers for spying and dictaphone purposes, where the dictaphone's part in the case was explained to him. This was done for psychological effect. Southard said he took 'quite a crowd' with him at the time he and the officers took James to the house and exhibited to him the dictaphone apparatus. A number of newspaper men, District Attorney Fitts, Deputy District Attorney Williams, Officers Scott Littleton, Davis and Dean were among the crowd present. He was then taken to the office of Lieutenant Morgan, where he was questioned for more than an hour. He was next taken to the District Attorney's office (Sunday forenoon) where he was examined at great length and was called upon to defend himself against grave charges made by the officers. Asked if James was informed that a charge of murdering his wife was under investigation, Southard answered, 'I believe not.' Attorney S. J. Silverman, who had been James' attorney in civil matters for some time and had heard that an attempt was being made to have James indicted for the murder of his wife, and James himself, testified that Silverman had instructed James to decline to answer any questions bearing on the alleged homicide except when Silverman was present. At any rate James refused to talk after he was asked the first few questions and, according to Southard, he told Fitts 'to go to hell.' They kept right on questioning him. Mr. Williams, a deputy district attorney, Griffen and several other investigators were present. Mr. Southard said it could have been possible that they told him they had the goods on him. The arrangement under which James was 'worked on' was that he was placed in a large chair, where he was compelled to sit for forty-eight hours, according to the admissions of Southard and other investigators, but, on the showing in the record, the questioning must have continued for sixty hours. The investigators worked in pairs on four-hour shifts. From sheer exhaustion the defendant several times fell asleep. Never less than two and as many as eight or ten officers were plying the defendant with questions at all hours of the night. The alleged confession began to break, after days of unremitting effort, at 1:45 o'clock in the morning. None, not even Mr. Silverman, the defendant's attorney, or Mr. Parsons, had knowledge of the place in which the defendant was held in private custody by the investigators. Neither his friends, relatives nor the public knew the place of detention. No warrant of arrest had been issued and there was no public record, or any record, which would enable any one not a member of the staff of investigators to know of or discover the presence of defendant.

"The law prescribes the place in which persons charged with crime may be detained. A private house located in a residential part of a city and not complying with the provisions of law prescribing the purpose and use of county jails and their management, is not a place where persons charged or suspected of crime may lawfully be detained. Grave abuses may be practiced against persons thus illegally held in secret confinement. (Pen. Code sec. 1597 et seq.) Every police officer who, having arrested any person upon a criminal charge, wilfully delays taking such person before a magistrate for examination is guilty of a misdemeanor (Sec. 145, Pen. Code). In the instant case the defendant was held in custody seventeen days without the issuance of a warrant and without being taken before a body which had power to examine the offense with which he was finally charged. He requested that his attorneys, first Mr. S. J. Silverman, whom the District Attorney had reported out of the city for the week end, and then Mr. R. E. Parsons, be contacted. Neither appearing to be immediately available, the inquisition in which a number of investigators took part, was vigorously and unremittingly pressed, without delay through many hours. It was not a proceeding authorized by statute and no sufficient reason was or could be shown why the request of defendant for advice of counsel, a right guaranteed by the Constitution and by statute to every person charged with crime, was not complied with. Section 849 of the Penal Code provides: 'When an arrest is made without a warrant by a peace officer * * * the person arrested must, without unnecessary delay, be taken before the nearest or most accessible magistrate in the county in which the arrest is made, and a complaint, stating the charge against the person, must be laid before the magistrate.' Section 859, following the procedure above cited, provides that the magistrate must allow the defendant a reasonable time to send for counsel and may postpone the examination for that purpose. Upon request of the defendant, the magistrate must require a peace officer to take a message to any counsel in the township without delay and without fee. These and other provisions of the statute cannot be circumvented by resorting to any methods which tend to deny the rights and protection which the law guarantees to every person charged with a crime. The statutes impose quite substantial fines and terms of imprisonment upon peace officers for the wilful disregard of their duties. (Pen. Code, Secs. 145, 147, 149.)

"Early in the confinement of the defendant, Officer Southard committed an admitted battery upon him. He and Officer Griffen were 'working' on the defendant when Southard struck him, according to his admission, in the face or on the side of the head. * * * Griffen said that after James was 'slapped' they continued to question him but he saw no other violence inflicted upon him. Griffen questioned him the next night until one o'clock a. m. During all the time he was being held incommunicado he did not see James sleep. * * * James had then been questioned, admittedly for forty-eight hours. There is evidence that it was longer * * * Griffen said that James did complain about his ear, but he examined it and couldn't find anything wrong with it. When Griffen returned to the place of examination at nine o'clock five other officers were with James. At 8:30 he was taken by Officers Kynette and Davis to Ninth and Alvarado Streets. Griffen and Southard followed. At noon he was taken to the District Attorney's office. Griffen did not recall whether James, when at the District Attorney's office on the day he was taken into custody, had requested that word be sent to Mr. Silverman, his attorney, requesting his presence. On Tuesday he saw the defendant from seven o'clock to one p. m. At eleven o'clock he gave instructions to 'book him' at the county jail where he was committed to the 'high power tank.'

"Southard admitted that the investigators operated in relays of pairs for a period of forty-eight hours. The defendant sat in a chair and was not allowed to remove his clothing. Several times he fell asleep from fatigue and exhaustion * * * it was solely Southard's disappointment in failing to have broken James down by harassment, coercion and physical violence, to a state of accepting Hope's sensational story (which was a composite product of the detectives and investigators in collaboration with Hope) which irked Southard to the point of physical violence. Southard had been an investigator for eight years and was seasoned to his task. His act was inexcusable and in violation of Section 149 of the Penal Code * * * The defendant was under no compulsion of law or duty to answer the officers in any particular manner or at all. Several apparently disinterested witnesses and one or two officers testified absolutely that James' face showed black and blue and swollen spots which were plainly visible for several days after his arrest. He testified to terrible beatings he received in the private house in which he was detained and that his body was made black and blue from the waist up and that he had suffered a hernia or rupture from the roughing which he passed through. A physician who had examined his abdomen five months prior testified that he had observed no evidence of hernia at that time but an examination since his arrest clearly disclosed the existence of a hernia. The prosecution called a few witnesses connected with the official staff who testified they did not observe any bruises on the defendant's face, but in the main their testimony was more in avoidance of direct and positive answers which should have been given by officers of the law. There can be no possible doubt, as testified to by one or two of the officers themselves, and by independent parties, that the defendant's ears bore marks and bruises which any one at all observant should have seen. James says he was practically made hard of hearing

by the head beating he had received from Southard and Griffen and that his body was black and blue from the waistline upward * * * Southard said he gave instructions that James was not to be left alone at any time; one or more investigators was questioning him at all times; some questions he answered and some questions he refused to answer; he would just sit and look blankly. Southard testified that he had three meals a day, but James testified he was practically starved into a state in which he told the investigators he would answer any questions in any way the investigators wanted him to answer. It is the admitted fact that he was interrogated by the District Attorney and his assistant, Mr. Williams, at all hours of the night, for as many as two and a half to three hours. One period continued from one o'clock to six o'clock. The officers also took part in interrogating the defendant. The plan adopted was that the investigators worked on the defendant to a point where it was deemed expedient or advisable to take him before the District Attorney, and if satisfactory progress had not been made he would be returned to the private custody of the investigators for the employment of such methods as would work a change of mental attitude on the part of the defendant. No other possible answer could be made to their unauthorized action which only ended with the procurement of the alleged confession. At times numerous officers would be present, and sometimes, James testified, he was left with but one officer. The evidence adduced by the prosecution affirmatively shows that the defendant was shifted back and forwards in the manner herein described many times at all hours of the day and night, continuing over a long inquisitorial period. At times Hope was brought into the room and engaged James in controversial disputes * * *

"James testified at the trial that practically everything he told Killion, Southard and the District Attorney concerning his wife was the story which the investigators had drilled into him for hours for several days. He said he was not able to stand further beatings and physical punishment with which he was threatened; that if he gave an answer to a question which did not suit the questioners he was struck on the head. He had also received one or two terrific beatings at the hands of Southard and Griffen; he would have preferred death rather than be returned to the private residence, which the officers had threatened to do, where most of the punishment was inflicted. The story he told Killion had been repeated a 'thousand' times to him; for days when they repeated to him Hope's story he told the officers he did not know what they were talking about until he was coerced into submission."

That the said procedure and proceedings and the use of the alleged confession in the trial, obtained in this manner, made of the trial a mock and a farce, that it degraded the proceedings to trial by ordeal, and trial by the torture chamber methods, and that such a trial is in violation of due process of law, was raised in the Supreme Court of California in this petition, and the rights claimed under the Constitution of the United States were denied on November 9th, 1939.

That such procedure and proceedings deny due process of law and are inconsistent with the "fundamental principles of liberty and justice which lie at the base of all our civil and political institutions" (Hebert v. Louisiana, 272 U. S. 312); that to deprive a person of sleep is a form of torture not less severe than physical violence, (Ziang Sun Wan v. U. S., 266 U. S. 1; 69 L. Ed. 131); that use of third degree methods to extort a purported confession and use of same in a trial is in violation of due process of law. (Brown v. Mississippi, 297 U. S. 278; Rounds v. State, 106 S. W. (2d) 212; People v. Dye, 119 Cal. App. 262.)

That the defendant was deprived of the right of counsel after his arrest and while he was being interrogated by the District Attorney himself, and his staff; that he had asked for said Counsel Silverman, and was denied his presence, although the District Attorney knew he had private counsel; that he was entitled under the Constitution and laws of the United States to be represented by private counsel of his own choice at all stages of the proceedings. That the denial of this right was a denial of rights guaranteed under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. (Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45.)

That this right was asserted by appellant in the petition for this writ as a right guaranteed under the Constitution of the United States in the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, and said right was considered and on November 9th, 1939, the Supreme Court of California held against appellant and ruled that his rights under the Constitution of the United States were not violated.

That your appellant was placed upon trial in California on a charge of the murder of Mary Emma James. That without any indictment or information or other proceeding, and without any notice, or any court processes to produce witnesses, the appellee produced witnesses from the State of Colorado and introduced into the case testimony regarding the death of a former wife, Winona James, in Colorado. A large portion of the trial was devoted to this evidence, and a portion of both the majority and dissenting opinion and a large portion of argument for the people is devoted to this evidence. That appellant was without notice of any such charge, and without any court processes from California to produce witnesses in rebuttal.

That the use of this evidence was challenged as violating the basic right of due process of law, namely, to receive notice of the charge one must meet, and be given an opportunity to meet it, and that such misuse of such alleged evidence in the case contravened his rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Appellant presented said claim upon petition for writ of habeas corpus on October 31, 1939, and said court, on November 9th, 1939, considered said question thus presented and ruled against the claim of your petitioner and held that no rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States were violated.

Since the judgment was pronounced in the trial court the witness Charles H. Hope has filed with the trial court, two affidavits in which he repudiates his testimony in the trial of the case and asserts that his testimony was perjured and was known to the prosecution to have been perjured when given. That copies of said affidavits were presented to the Supreme Court of California and were considered by said court in connection with said petition for writ of habeas corpus, said affidavits setting forth that said conviction was based on testimony that was perjured and false in every material part.

That said petition for writ of habeas corpus under authority of Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103, asked the California Supreme Court to reconsider the said case; that to sustain a conviction upon such perjured testimony was in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Such claimed right under said Fourteenth Amendment was considered on November 9th, 1939, by the Supreme Court of California and denied on that date.

That a trial based on perjured testimony is in violation of due process of law and the State which still has corrective processes, in denying them, denies due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103;

Jones v. Commonwealth of Ky., 97 F. (2d) 333.

Each of these questions raised was substantial. (Zucht v. King, 260 U. S. 174, 176, 177.) Each denied to appellant fundamental rights to a fair trial guaranteed as a part of due process of law under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Whether the use of live rattlesnakes in the court room constituted a denial of due process of law under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and the equal protection of the laws, was raised on petition for writ of habeas corpus on October 31st, 1939. The Supreme Court of California considered petitioner's challenge on November 9th, 1939, and denied the same.

On petition for writ of habeas corpus presented on October 31st, 1939, petitioner challenged the use of alleged testimony obtained by third degree methods, extorted by means of physical and mental force, as a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The said challenge was considered by the Supreme Court of California and denied on November 9th, 1939.

Petitioner challenged on habeas corpus the introduction in evidence in the trial of witnesses from Colorado regarding the death of appellant's wife in Colorado, as a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and said challenge was considered by the Supreme Court of California and denied on November 9th, 1939.

Petitioner presented by reference two affidavits from the principal witness in the case, one Charles H. Hope, to the effect that said Hope perjured himself during the trial and that such perjury was known to the prosecuting officers, and petitioner challenged the conviction based upon such testimony as violative of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Such challenged right under the Constitution was denied on November 9th, 1939.

Petitioner also petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus on the grounds that he was deprived of counsel at the time of his interrogation, and that he was entitled to counsel at all stages of the proceedings; that such denial constituted a denial of due process of law and equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Said challenge was on November 9th, 1939, denied by the Supreme Court of the State of California.

The trial was conducted with all the venom of the rattlesnakes which were exhibited and used to terrify the jury. In this respect it was worse than a mob trial. It commenced with a mob of policemen, District Attorney investigators, the District Attorney and his deputies breaking into the appellant's home and without legal process kidnaping him and holding him incommunicado, and engaging in admitted tortures. It resembled more a group of outlaws engaged in Lynch law in the early days of California when court procedure was ignored and an angry mob decided the fate of a man. With respect to the snakes it reverted to the barbarity of the days of trial by torture and ordeal, returning us to the rack. The use of foreign testimony from another State on a matter unrelated to this case, certainly violated every fundamental essential of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws, against which there was no opportunity to defend.

MAJOR RAYMOND LISENBA (ROBERT S. JAMES),
Petitioner,

vs.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

BRIEF FOR PETITIONER.

MORRIS LAVINE,
Counsel for Petitioner.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1940

No. 134

MAJOR RAYMOND LISENBA (ROBERT S. JAMES),
Petitioner,

vs.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

BRIEF ON CERTIORARI ON HABEAS CORPUS.

To the Honorable Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and to the Honorable Associate Justices Thereof:

In this matter the entire records, files and proceedings in the case of Major Raymond Lisenba v. The People of the State of California, No. 133, were adopted by reference in a consideration by the Supreme Court of the State of California (R. 28). A stipulation was also entered by Attorney General Earl Warren, by Warner I. Praul, for the appellee, and Morris Lavine, attorney for appellant, that the records, proceedings, exhibits, files and documents on appeal from the judgment shall be deemed part of the record on proceedings for habeas corpus by reference (R. 32).

Appellant proceeded by habeas corpus to exhaust all State remedies for the protection of his Federal constitutional rights in this matter, and particularly with reference to receiving in evidence the affidavits of Charles H. Hope to the effect that his testimony was false and perjured and that there was no truth to the so-called rattlesnake story about which he testified.

The points and authorities upon which we rely in this case are as follows:

1. A judgment of conviction for murder resting upon confessions shown to have been extorted by officers of the State by torture of the accused violates procedural due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and such judgment is void.

Chambers v. Florida, 309 U. S. 227, 84 L. Ed. 716;
Brown v. Mississippi, 297 U. S. 278, 80 L. Ed. 682;
Canty v. Alabama, 309 U. S. 629, 84 L. Ed. 988;
White v. Texas, 310 U. S. 530, 84 L. Ed. 1342.

To deprive a human being of sleep is a form of torture not less severe than physical violence.

Ziang Sung Wan v. U. S., 266 U. S. 1, 69 L. Ed. 131.

A confession so obtained vitiates the verdict.

Rounds v. State, 106 S. W. (2d) 212;
People v. Dye, 119 Cal. App. 262;
Downer v. Dunaway, 53 F. (2d) 586.

2. The bringing of live, hissing, writhing rattlesnakes into the courtroom during the trial of the case was an appeal to the passions and prejudices of the jury and made the whole proceeding but a mask and pretense of a trial.

Chambers v. Florida, 309 U. S. 227, 84 L. Ed. 716;
Frank v. Mangum, 237 U. S. 309, 59 L. Ed. 969;
Moore v. Dempsey, 261 U. S. 86, 67 L. Ed. 543;
Downer v. Dunaway, 53 F. (2d) 586;
Flege v. State, 93 Neb. 610, 142 N. W. 276, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1107;
McKay v. State, 90 Neb. 63, 132 N. W. 741, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 714.

3. Use of evidence from the State of Colorado in the State of California to prove a collateral and disconnected offense was without notice and without opportunity to defend, and therefore was a deprivation of due process of law.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 232, 4 S. Ct. 111;

Iowa Central Ruy. Co. v. State of Iowa, 40 L. Ed. 467;

Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. Ed. 1165, 21 S. Ct. 836;

Holmes v. Conway, 241 U. S. 624, 60 L. Ed. 1211, 36 S. Ct. 681;

Hagar v. Reclamation Dist., 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. Ed. 569, 4 S. Ct. 663;

Hooker v. Los Angeles, 188 U. S. 314, 47 L. Ed. 487, 23 S. Ct. 395, 63 L. R. A. 471;

Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 53 L. Ed. 97, 29 S. Ct. 14;

Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, 77 L. Ed. 158, 53 S. Ct. Rep. 55;

Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350;

Snyder v. Massachusetts, 291 U. S. 97, 78 L. Ed. 674;

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. Ed. 565.

4. A conviction obtained by perjured testimony is void under the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103, 79 L. Ed. 794;

Jones v. Commonwealth of Ky., 97 F. (2d) 335.

5. Deprivation of counsel after an arrest in California is a deprivation of due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, 77 L. Ed. 158;

Article I, Sec. 8, Constitution of California.

6. All of these acts constitute hostile discrimination, oppression and inequality, and therefore violate the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Truax v. Corrigan, 257 U. S. 312, 66 L. Ed. 254;
Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 374, 30 L. Ed. 227;

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. Ed. 232.

7. The inhibition contained in the 14th Amendment has exclusive reference to State action and means that no officer or agent by whom its powers are exerted shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. In this case officers of the law, acting as agents for the State, denied such equal protection, as did the court during the trial of the case.

Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339;
Smith v. Texas, 85 L. Ed. 106.

8. Under the circumstances petitioner was denied due process of law in that the trial court possessed no jurisdiction to enter judgment.

In re Nielsen, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 118;
In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 38 L. Ed. 149, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323;
Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, 77 L. Ed. 158, 53 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55.

9. The decision of the Supreme Court of California is itself therefore a denial of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws.

Snyder v. Massachusetts, 291 U. S. 97, 78 L. Ed. 674, 54 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330;
Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78;

Respectfully submitted,

MORRIS LAVINE,
Attorney for Appellant.

MAJOR RAYMOND LISENBA,
Petitioner,

vs.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
Respondent.

On Writ of Certiorari to the Supreme Court of the Stat of California

RESPONDENT'S BRIEF

STATEMENT

This is a companion case to the cause entitled Major Raymond Lisenba, Petitioner, vs. The People of the State of California, October Term, 1940, No. 133. The present cause arose from an order made and entered by the Supreme Court of the State of California denying without prejudice petitioner's application for a writ of habeas corpus; whereas cause No. 133 arose from the judgment made and entered by said Supreme Court affirming the judgment of conviction.

In respondent's brief filed in cause No. 133, we set forth the history of the case and reference to the opinions rendered by the court below, statement of the points upon which petitioner relied, a statement of the case containing all that is material to the consideration of the questions presented, with appropriate page references to the printed record, and respondent's argument.

The same points are presented by petitioner in the instant cause as were presented by him in cause No. 133, except that he has added three additional matters which we shall later comment on herein. The same authorities are relied upon by him together with several additional authorities.

The entire records, files and exhibits before the Supreme Court of the State of California on the appeal from the judgment and order de ying a new trial were, by reference, made a part of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus (R. 15), and the petition was considered upon all records, files and proceedings in the trial and subsequent to the trial. (R. 28.) By stipulation of the parties, the record in cause No. 133 may also be considered the record in cause No. 134. (R. 32.)

POINTS RELIED UPON BY PETITIONER

The points relied upon herein by petitioner, in the order set forth in his brief, are as follows:

I. That a judgment of conviction for murder resting upon confessions shown to have been extorted by officers of the State by torture of the accused violates the procedural due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and such judgment is void;

II. That the bringing of live, hissing, writhing rattlesnakes into the court room during the trial of the case was an appeal to the passions and prejudices of the jury and made the whole proceeding but a mask and pretense of a trial;

III. That use of evidence from the State of Colorado in the State of California to prove a collateral and disconnected offense was without notice and without opportunity to defend, and therefore was a deprivation of due process of law;

IV. That a conviction obtained by perjured testimony is void under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States;

V. That deprivation of counsel after an arrest in California is a deprivation of due process of law guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States;

VI. That all of these acts constitute hostile discrimination, oppression and inequality, and therefore violate the equal protection clause of the

Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States;

VII. That the inhibition contained in the Fourteenth Amendment has exclusive reference to State action and means that no officer or agent by whom its powers are exerted shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. In this case officers of the law, acting as agents for the State, denied such equal protection, as did the Court during the trial of the case;

VIII. That under the circumstances petitioner was denied due process of law in that the trial court possessed no jurisdiction to enter judgment;

IX. That the decision of the Supreme Court of California is itself therefore a denial of due process of law and the equal protection of the laws.

ARGUMENT

I. THAT A JUDGMENT OF CONVICTION FOR MURDER RESTING UPON CONFESSIONS SHOWN TO HAVE BEEN EXTORTED BY OFFICERS OF THE STATE BY TORTURE OF THE ACCUSED VIOLATES PROCEDURAL DUE PROCESS OF LAW GUARANTEED BY THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES. AND SUCH JUDGMENT IS VOID

The record does not show that petitioner made any confession by reason of torture or any other form of compulsion. In respondent's brief filed in cause No. 133, we have fully presented the evidence relative to the manner in which the confessions were obtained and discussed the authorities presented by petitioner in his brief under this point. The evidence in the instant case does not present a situation in anywise comparable to that found in Chambers vs. Florida, 309 U. S. 227, 60 S. Ct. 472, 84 L. Ed. 716; Brown vs. Mississippi, 297 U. S. 278, 56 S. Ct. 461, 80 L. Ed. 682; Canty vs. Alabama, 309 U. S. 629, 60 S. Ct. 612, 84 L. Ed. 988; White vs. Texas, 310 U. S. 530, 60 S. Ct. 1032, 84 L. Ed. 1342; Ziang Sung Wan vs. United States, 266 U. S. 1, 45 S. Ct. 1, 69 L. Ed. 131; People vs. Dye, 119 Cal. App. 262; or Downer vs. Dunaway, 53 Fed. (2d) 586, cited by petitioner. All of the above cases were cited by petitioner in his brief in cause number 133.

The additional authority of Rounds vs. State, 106 S. W. (2d) 212, is cited herein by petitioner. The facts in the instant case are not comparable to those found in Rounds vs. State, for in that case the defendant was deprived of sleep for four days and nights, which the Court stated was a form of torture not less severe than physical violence.

The evidence regarding the introduction in evidence and exhibiting to the jury of two live rattlesnakes has been fully presented by respondent under Point II of its brief filed in cause No. 133. We there pointed out that the rattlesnakes introduced in evidence and exhibited to the jury were the identical rattlesnakes used by petitioner upon Mary James, his wife, as a contributing cause to her death. All the facts and circumstances surrounding the purchase of the snakes by the accomplice Hope, the special contraptions or boxes constructed for their safekeeping, the careful manner in which they were brought into the court and exhibited to the jury, and their immediate removal from the court room, have been set forth in detail in respondent's brief under this point in cause No. 133. None of the authorities cited by petitioner under this point makes the procedure thus alluded to a violation of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States.

The authorities are to the effect that instrumentalities used in the commission of the offense, when properly identified, are admissible in evidence as part of the res gestae, to illustrate and corroborate the testimony of witnesses, and to demonstrate the method of the crime.

III. THAT USE OF EVIDENCE FROM THE STATE OF COLORADO IN THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA TO PROVE A COLLATERAL AND DISCONNECTED OFFENSE WAS WITHOUT NOTICE AND WITHOUT OPPORTUNITY TO DEFEND, AND THEREFORE WAS A DEPRIVATION OF DUE PROCESS OF LAW

Respondent's brief filed in cause No. 133 sets forth in detail the evidence relative to the death of a former wife of petitioner and the circumstances connected therewith which established indubitably a motive and scheme on the part of petitioner to financially enhance himself by insuring the life of a young woman and thereafter marrying and killing her. Respondent has set forth the authorities in said brief which announce the rule and the reasons why such evidence is admissible.

The evidence in the case, pointed out in respondent's brief in cause No. 133, shows that petitioner had due notice that such evidence would be introduced against him at his trial, and that he was accorded every opportunity to defend himself against such evidence.

None of the authorities cited by petitioner in his brief under this point has any relation to the situation presented by the facts in the instant case.

Proof of the circumstances of the death of petitioner's former wife in Colorado was proper and relevant evidence to controvert petitioner's claim of accident or death in an attempt to commit an abortion, and is also admissible where the evidence is susceptible to such an inference.

People vs. Morani, 196 Cal. 154, 160;

Holt vs. United States, 42 Fed. (2d) 103, 106, 107;
R. vs. George Joseph Smith, XXI Crim. App. Rep. 229, 236.

IV. THAT A CONVICTION OBTAINED BY PERJURED TESTIMONY IS VOID UNDER THE DUE PROCESS CLAUSE OF THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

The Supreme Court of the State of California had before it in connection with the application for a writ of habeas corpus all of the evidence in the case as well as the affidavits of the accomplice Hope, filed nearly three years after his plea of guilty, wherein he stated that his testimony given at the trial was false and known to the prosecution to be false. Upon such record there was a hopeless conflict in the evidence as raised by these affidavits of the accomplice Hope and the Supreme Court of the State of California resolved such conflict against petitioner by denying without prejudice said application, which action of said Supreme Court has not foreclosed the petitioner from again presenting the matter upon a proper and sufficient showing.

Mooney vs. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103, 55 S. Ct. 340, 79 L. Ed. 794.

Petitioner under this point has cited the case of Jones vs. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 97 Fed. (2d) 335, which he did not cite in his brief in cause No. 133. In that case the Attorney General of Kentucky was strongly inclined to the view that Tom Jones was convicted on perjured testimony. Such is not the situation in the instant case. Here, the Attorney General is of the view that the testimony of the accomplice Hope was not false and therefore petitioner was not convicted on perjured testimony.

V. THAT DEPRIVATION OF COUNSEL AFTER AN ARREST IN CALIFORNIA IS A DEPRIVATION OF DUE PROCESS OF LAW GUARANTEED BY THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

Respondent in its brief in cause No. 133, has set forth the evidence under this point, which evidence shows that petitioner was not deprived of counsel at any stage of the proceedings against him. In fact, this evidence shows that he had the benefit of counsel the day following his arrest on Sunday on the charge of incest, that his counsel was present in court at the time of petitioner's arraignment on said charge of incest, which arraignment took place within two days after his arrest.

The record shows a situation in respect of counsel which is in no way analogous to that present in Powell vs. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, 53, S. Ct. 55, 77 L. Ed. 158, cited by petitioner under this point.

VI. THAT ALL OF THESE ACTS CONSTITUTE HOSTILE DISCRIMINATION, OPPRESSION AND INEQUALITY, AND THEREFORE VIOLATE THE EQUAL PROTECTION CLAUSE OF THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

Petitioner, under this point in his brief filed in cause No. 133, contended that he was denied equal protection of the law when the officers took him to a private house adjoining his home and showed him the dictograph apparatus and by Officer Southard committing battery upon him; also that he was unjustly discriminated against by reason of the confessions, the rattlesnakes and the Colorado affair being introduced in evidence.

In respondent's brief filed in said cause No. 133, we pointed out that the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States has to do with the application of laws and not with individual invasion of individual rights; that mere error of judgment on the part of officials will not support a claim of discrimination, and that the equal protection clause has to do with intentional and systematic discrimination by the law itself or by those charged with its enforcement.

Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 9;
Sunday Lake Iron Co. vs. Township of Wakefield, 247 U. S. 350, 352, 62 L. Ed. 1154; Smith vs. State of Texas, 61 S. Ct. 164, 165.

VII. THAT THE INHIBITION CONTAINED IN THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT HAS EXCLUSIVE REFERENCE TO STATE ACTION AND MEANS THAT NO OFFICER OR AGENT BY WHOM ITS POWERS ARE EXERTED SHALL DENY TO ANY PERSON WITHIN ITS JURISDICTION THE EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS. IN THIS CASE OFFICERS OF THE LAW, ACTING AS AGENTS FOR THE STATE, DENIED SUCH EQUAL PROTECTION, AS DID THE COURT DURING THE TRIAL OF THE CASE

This is merely a restatement of Point No. VI and our answer there is our answer here.

VIII. THAT UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES PETITIONER WAS DENIED DUE PROCESS OF LAW IN THAT THE TRIAL COURT POSSESSED NO JURISDICTION TO ENTER JUDGMENT

Respondent's answer to this matter is that the record shows that petitioner was not denied due process of law and that therefore the trial court did possess and never lost jurisdiction to enter judgment.

IX. THAT THE DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT OF CALIFORNIA IS ITSELF THEREFORE A DENIAL OF DUE PROCESS OF LAW AND THE EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

This is a mere repetition of previous contentions made by petitioner. There is not one instance shown where due process of law was denied to petitioner at any time during his trial or at the conclusion thereof. The record shows that he was accorded all his rights as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States and by the Constitution of the State of California from the time of his arrest to and including the time of his conviction and sentence.

CONCLUSION

As shown in respondent's brief in case No. 133, petitioner herein at no time and in no manner was denied those rights to which he is entitled under the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. His confessions were not obtained by force, threats, duress or other compulsion; but were voluntarily made at a time, place and to persons selected by himself. He had advice of counsel, and was not held incommunicado. The introduction in evidence of the instrumentalities purchased for and used in the cold blooded and heartless murder of his wife was proper. The proof of the circumstances of the death of petitioner's former wife in Colorado was proper and relevant evidence to show motive, plan and scheme, and to controvert petitioner's claim of accident or death in an attempt to commit an abortion. Petitioner was shown by overwhelming evidence to be guilty of the crime charged. No satisfactory showing was made to impel the Supreme Court of California to conclude that the witness Hope had perjured himself; the weight of the evidence presented to said court being to the opposite effect. The action of the Supreme Court of California in denying the petition for writ of habeas corpus was therefore proper.

For the foregoing reasons respondent submits that the decision of the Supreme Court of California denying the petition for writ of habeas corpus should be affirmed.

Petition for rehearing in No. 133 1

Summary of grounds upon which petition for rehearing is based 1

A. Where constitutional questions are involved in the conviction and death sentence of a man a rehearing ought to be granted so that the case may be decided by a majority of the Court. No death penalty should be imposed through what is really a lack of decision by the highest court of the nation 1

B. The points of law raised in this case are of great importance in establishing the law of the case throughout the United States relative thereto, and ought to be decided by a majority of the Court. Certain matters were overlooked in the presentation of the case originally and in oral argument which this Honorable Court should consider before this case is finally and definitely determined 2

Argument:

I. The 14th Amendment proscribes use in evidence of a confession obtained following the third degree. Here the petitioner was seized by the District Attorney's men and taken to the torture house next door. There followed the unauthorized acts by the District Attorney and his investigators, the beatings, tortures, deprivation of food, sleep, counsel, the removal to and retention of petitioner in the "High Power" tank of the jail, undenied threats by the District Attorney, questionings and cross-questioning into the early hours of the morning until a purported confession was obtained and thereafter used in evidence against petitioner. The 14th Amendment applies to and operates equally upon white men as well as negroes. 8

No arraignment as required by law 12

Confined in "High Power" tank 12

The "Third Degree" implied confession from silence 12

No food. Then the psychological third degree 12

At midnight he begged "Give me something to eat" 13

No denial that the District Attorney threatened him 13

The alleged "Confesion" started at 1:55 A. M. after undenied threats, questioning and browbeating 14

The presumption of fear from previous violence, threats and mistreatment not overcome 14

The District Attorney without authority to seize petitioner and hold him in private house 14

Use of silence on advice of counsel as implied admission of guilt 15

Fear once instilled is presumed to continue 17

The psychological third degree 18

Early morning—a meal for the hungry prisoner — then the "Story" 19

The purported confession promptly denied on court appearance 20

White men of the West entitled to equal justice the same as negro of the South 20

Page

II. The use of two live, writhing and horrifying rattlesnakes and a dead snake with mouth and jaws open, was solely to bring about a verdict through passion and prejudice and was so inflammatory in its nature as to deprive petitioner of a fair and impartial trial guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to to the Constitution of the United States. The snakes—called "Lightning" and "Lethal" proved nothing —but did have a lightning effect on the jury and lethal effect on the defendant. A trial based on passion and prejudice deprives accused of rights under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States 21

Snakes eerily sound rattles 22

Demonstrative evidence only admissible when it demonstrates something. The snakes demonstrated nothing 25

III. The use in California of evidence brought from the State of Colorado by the agents of the State of California, without any notice or opportunity to defend deprived the petitioner of the fundamentals of due process of law. The indictment did not contain the names of the Colorado witnesses in advance nor was petitioner notified until the trial was in progress. A requested continuance was denied 26

The indictment contained no names of Colorado witnesses 26

California has no provision for a Bill of Particulars 28

No California process available 28

No notice or opportunity to defend 29

Page

Jury distracted from real issue. Petitioner confounded in his defense before California jury in Colorado evidence 30

California procedure does not permit depositions in homicide cases 31

IV. California's principal witness was one Charles H. Hope, who since the trial stated he was promised immunity to testify falsely and that he did testify falsely in the trial at the request of the prosecution who knew his testimony was "all the bunk." The use of testimony known to be perjured violates due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States 32

Hope's affidavits that he committed perjury undenied 41

V. The petitioner was denied the right of counsel, and therefore due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States 42

VI. Each of the actions of the State, violative of the fundamental rights of the petitioner, denied to him the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States 45

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1940

No. 133

MAJOR RAYMOND LISENBA,

Petitioner,

vs.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

PETITION FOR REHEARING.

To the Honorable Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and to the Honorable Associate Justices Thereof:

Your petitioner, Major Raymond Lisenba, most respectfully petitions for a rehearing in the decision of this Honorable Court rendered on April 7th, 1941, by an equally divided Court, as I bases this petition upon the following grounds, to-wit:

A.

WHERE CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS ARE INVOLVED IN THE CONVICTION AND DEATH SENTENCE OF A MAN A REHEARING OUGHT TO BE GRANTED SO THAT THE CASE MAY BE DECIDED BY A MAJORITY OF THE COURT. NO DEATH PENALTY SHOULD

1/

BE IMPOSED THROUGH WHAT IS REALLY A LACK OF DECISION BY THE HIGHEST COURT OF THE NATION.

B.

THE POINTS OF LAW RAISED IN THIS CASE ARE OF GREAT IMPORTANCE IN ESTABLISHING THE LAW OF THE CASE THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES RELATIVE THERETO, AND OUGHT TO BE DECIDED BY A MAJORITY OF THE COURT. CERTAIN MATTERS WERE OVERLOOKED IN THE PRESENTATION OF THE CASE ORIGINALLY AND IN ORAL ARGUMENT WHICH THIS HONORABLE COURT SHOULD CONSIDER BEFORE THIS CASE IS FINALLY AND DEFINITELY DETERMINED.

I.

THE 14TH AMENDMENT PROSCRIBES USE IN EVIDENCE OF A CONFESSION OBTAINED FOLLOWING THE THIRD DEGREE. HERE THE PETITIONER WAS SEIZED BY THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S MEN AND TAKEN TO THE TORTURE HOUSE NEXT DOOR. THERE FOLLOWED THE UNAUTHORIZED ACTS BY THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY AND HIS INVESTIGATORS, THE BEATINGS, TORTURES, DEPRIVATION OF FOOD, SLEEP, COUNSEL, THE REMOVAL TO AND RETENTION OF PETITIONER IN THE "HIGH POWER" TANK OF THE JAIL, UNDENIED THREATS BY THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY, QUESTIONING AND CROSS-QUESTIONING INTO THE EARLY HOURS OF THE MORNING UNTIL A PURPORTED CONFESSION WAS OBTAINED AND THEREAFTER USED IN EVIDENCE AGAINST PETITIONER. THE 14TH AMENDMENT APPLIES TO AND OPERATES EQUALLY UPON WHITE MEN AS WELL AS NEGROES.

II.

THE USE OF TWO LIVE, WRITHING AND HORRIFYING RATTLESNAKES AND A DEAD SNAKE WITH MOUTH AND JAWS OPEN, WAS SOLELY TO BRING ABOUT A VERDICT THROUGH PASSION AND PREJUDICE AND WAS SO INFLAMMATORY IN ITS NATURE AS TO DEPRIVE PETITIONER OF A FAIR AND IMPARTIAL TRIAL GUARANTEED BY

THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES. THE SNAKES—CALLED "LIGHTNING" AND "LETHAL" PROVED NOTHING—BUT DID HAVE A LIGHTNING EFFECT ON THE JURY AND LETHAL EFFECT ON THE DEFENDANT. A TRIAL BASED ON PASSION AND PREJUDICE DEPRIVES THE ACCUSED OF RIGHTS UNDER THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

III.

THE USE IN CALIFORNIA OF EVIDENCE BROUGHT FROM THE STATE OF COLORADO BY THE AGENTS OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, WITHOUT ANY NOTICE OR OPPORTUNITY TO DEFEND DEPRIVED THE PETITIONER OF THE FUNDAMENTALS OF DUE PROCESS OF LAW. THE INDICTMENT DID NOT CONTAIN THE NAMES OF THE COLORADO WITNESSES IN ADVANCE NOR WAS PETITIONER NOTIFIED UNTIL THE TRIAL WAS IN PROGRESS. A REQUESTED CONTINUANCE WAS DENIED.

IV.

CALIFORNIA'S PRINCIPAL WITNESS WAS ONE CHARLES H. HOPE, WHO SINCE THE TRIAL STATED HE WAS PROMISED IMMUNITY TO TESTIFY FALSELY AND THAT HE DID TESTIFY FALSELY IN THE TRIAL AT THE REQUEST OF THE PROSECUTION WHO KNEW HIS TESTIMONY WAS "ALL THE BUNK." THE USE OF TESTIMONY KNOWN TO BE PERJURED VIOLATES DUE PROCESS OF LAW GUARANTEED BY THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

V.

THE PETITIONER WAS DENIED THE RIGHT OF COUNSEL, AND THEREFORE DUE PROCESS OF LAW GUARANTEED BY THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

VI.

EACH OF THE ACTIONS OF THE STATE, VIOLATIVE OF THE FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE PETITIONER, DENIED TO HIM THE

EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS GUARANTEED BY THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

A.

WHERE CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS ARE INVOLVED IN THE CONVICTION AND DEATH SENTENCE OF A MAN A REHEARING OUGHT TO BE GRANTED SO THAT THE CASE MAY BE DECIDED BY A MAJORITY OF THE COURT. NO DEATH PENALTY SHOULD BE IMPOSED THROUGH WHAT IS REALLY A LACK OF DECISION BY THE HIGHEST COURT OF THE NATION.

The petitioner, Major Raymond Lisenba, is sentenced to death. This sentence stands because four Justices of this Honorable Court disagree with four other Justices of this Court. The result is that the judgment has been affirmed by what virtually amounts to a lack of decision, and therefore solely by operation of law. No man should go to his death on a lack of decision by the highest court in the land. No death penalty has heretofore stood affirmed through lack of decision.

Under the Constitution and laws of the State of California, if a single juror of the twelve jurors required to pass upon the verdict disagrees with the other eleven, a new trial is mandatory. The Court is powerless to carry into execution any judgment unless all twelve jurors agree.

Article I, Section 7, Constitution of California.

People v. Garcia, 98 Cal. App. 702, 277 Pac. 747.

If all twelve jurors agree on a guilty verdict they must still agree on the penalty to be imposed, and if a single juror disagrees with the other eleven on the imposition of the death penalty, such disagreement requires a new trial, even though all the jurors agree that the defendant is guilty and disagree only as to the penalty—as between the death penalty and life imprisonment.

If all twelve jurors agree on the death penalty,—still the trial judge in the case may set aside the verdict and grant a new trial. (Section 1181, Penal Code of California.) Such right and power is discretionary and the laws of California require it to be exercised in case the verdict has been reached by any means other than a fair expression of opinion on the part of all of the jurors. A single judge is required to grant a new trial if there has been an unfair trial in any respect whatsoever. (Section 1181, Penal Code of California.)

People v. Duvernay, 2 Cal. Dec. 236;
People v. Gilliland, 39 Cal. App. (2d) 252, 264;
Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103;
Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, 77 L. Ed. 158.

Yet where four Honorable Justices of this high court—selected as the finest legal minds in this country—disagree with four other members of this high court as to whether the petitioner's constitutional right to a fair trial has been invaded, the result, unless a rehearing is granted, would be of far less effect than if a single juror disagreed on the question of innocence or guilt or on the question of penalty to be imposed, or if a single judge disagreed with the jury while sitting in the trial of the case.

Surely in this great land of ours under the American way of life the effect of the views of four members of this Honorable Court cannot be and should not be given so little weight in comparison with that given to the views of a single juror or a single trial judge, and we most respectfully pray that all members of this Honorable Court join in voting for a rehearing so that the issues heretofore presented on this appeal may be decisively determined by a majority opinion of the highest court in the United States.

The history of this Court has been that where decisions on constitutional questions are involved the case will not be decided finally unless there is a concurrence of a majority of all the Justices.

In the case of George Briscoe v. Comm. Bank of the State of Kentucky, et al, 8 L. Ed. 887, 888, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall delivered the opinion of the Court in this and another case. Both cases were continued until the next term of the Court. The Chief Justice stated:

> "The practice of this court is not (except in cases of absolute necessity) to deliver any judgment in cases where constitutional questions are involved, unless four judges concur in opinion, thus making the decision that of a majority of the whole court. In the present cases four judges do not concur in opinion as to the constitutional questions which have been argued. The court therefore directs these cases to be re-argued at the next term, under the expectation that a larger number of the judges may then be present."

At that time the Court consisted of six members and it required four to have a majority of the Court.

In the famous case of Dred Scott v. Sanford, 15 L. Ed. 691 at 698, Mr. Chief Justice Taney, pointing out that there were differences in the opinion of the Court as to questions that were considered of high importance, it was deemed advisable to continue the case and direct a re-argument in order that the Court might have an opportunity to give to the whole subject a more deliberate consideration. The case was then ultimately decided by a four to two Court.

In the cases of The Mayor of New York v. George Miln, et al.—George Briscoe v. Comm. Bank of Ky., 9 L. Ed. 60, the Court, on writ of error stated, through Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, "The Court cannot know whether there will be a full Court during the term; but as the Court is now composed the constitutional cases will not be taken up."

It appeared that the Court at the time of this motion and during the whole term was composed of six justices, the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Justice Duval not having been filled. The case was later decided at the following term of the Court.

In the case of George Briscoe v. Comm. Bank of Ky., 9. L. Ed. 709, the Court refused to take up considerations involving constitutional questions when the Court was not full. (9 L.-Ed. 60.) This would indicate a belief that it was the intention of the framers of the Constitution that constitutional questions should be heard and determined by a full Court and judgment should be rendered—not by operation of law—but by a decision or judgment of the Court. Further, it was intended that such questions be heard and determined by a full Court and that litigants have that right.

The legal tender cases of Knox v. Lee and Parker v. Davis were first argued before the Supreme Court on November 17, 1869, re-argued February 23, 1871, and further on April 18th and 19th, 1871, until decided by a majority of the Court.

In the comparatively recent case of RR. Commission of California v. Pacific Gas and Electric Company, June 1, 1937, in a per curiam opinion the Court affirmed a decree of the Northern District of California by an equally divided Court. Mr. Justice Southerland took no part in the consideration of that case. (October Term, 1936; 81 L. Ed. 1933, 1934.) A rehearing was granted and the case was restored to the docket for reargument October 13, 1937, and a decision was finally rendered by this Honorable Court on January 3, 1938. (302 U. S. 389, 391; 82 L. Ed. 319, 321.)

Petitioner most respectfully prays therefore that this Honorable Court grant a rehearing in the case so that a majority of this Court may decide the issues herein involved and that a man's life may not be forfeited where four of the Justices of the highest Court in the land are of the opinion that his constitutional rights have been invaded and where less effect would be given to their views than where a single juror or a single trial judge might hold the same views.

B.

THE POINTS OF LAW RAISED IN THIS CASE ARE OF GREAT IMPORTANCE IN ESTABLISHING THE LAW OF THE CASE THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES RELATIVE THERETO, AND OUGHT TO BE DECIDED BY A MAJORITY OF THE COURT. CERTAIN MATTERS WERE OVERLOOKED IN THE PRESENTATION OF THE CASE ORIGINALLY AND IN ORAL ARGUMENT WHICH THIS HONORABLE COURT SHOULD CONSIDER BEFORE THIS CASE IS FINALLY AND DEFINITELY DETERMINED.

In Seeking a rehearing in this Court, we desire an opportunity to present many facts and clarify several matters which petitioner was unable to present at the oral argument, due to the fact that although five points were raised and the record comprises 1140 pages on the appeal from the judgment, only one hour was taken to present the case. It resulted that certain factual matters which were misstated by the respondent, the People of the State of California, were not corrected, and certain matters remained unclarified, and certain other matters could not even be reached for discussion.

ARGUMENT.

I.

THE 14TH AMENDMENT PROSCRIBES USE IN EVIDENCE OF A CONFESSION OBTAINED FOLLOWING THE THIRD DEGREE. HERE THE PETITIONER WAS SEIZED BY THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S MEN AND TAKEN TO THE TORTURE HOUSE NEXT DOOR.

THERE FOLLOWED THE UNAUTHORIZED ACTS BY THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY AND HIS INVESTIGATORS, THE BEATINGS, TORTURES, DEPRIVATION OF FOOD, SLEEP, COUNSEL, THE REMOVAL TO AND RETENTION OF PETITIONER IN THE "HIGH POWER" TANK OF THE JAIL, UNDENIED THREATS BY THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY, QUESTIONINGS AND CROSS-QUESTIONING INTO THE EARLY HOURS OF THE MORNING UNTIL A PURPORTED CONFESSION WAS OBTAINED AND THEREAFTER USED IN EVIDENCE AGAINST PETITIONER. THE 14TH AMENDMENT APPLIES TO AND OPERATES EQUALLY UPON WHITE MEN AS WELL AS NEGROES.

For instance—in reference to the argument on the third degree administered to this petitioner by the agents of the State of California, the facts show that the petitioner was taken into custody by the district attorney's investigators (R. 484), supervised by an assistant district attorney, and was taken to the district attorney's office in the same building in which the county jail is located; then he was returned to a private house next door where he was kept incommunicado two days and nights—admittedly 48 hours—and more likely 60 hours (R. 492, 493)—district attorney's investigator Littleton said 60 hours (R. 824).

Mr. Justice Frankfurter, during the oral argument, asked if the district attorney had authority to make an arrest in California, and the deputy district attorney presenting the matter for the State of California replied that the district attorney had such authority, but said he could not point to the particular code section giving that authority.

Section 817 of the California Penal Code defines who are peace officers having the right to make arrests. This section states:

> "Peace Officer Defined. A peace officer is a sheriff of a county, marshal of a municipal court, a constable of a township, marshal, policeman of a city or town, inspector of the California State Board of Pharmacy not exceeding ten in number, special agents and assistant special agents of the Board of Medical Examiners of the State of California, (an inspector of the Board of Osteopathic Examiners of the State of California, an inspector of the Board of Chiropractic Examiners of the State of California,) the superintendent and the special criminal investigators of the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation, and the Chief and inspectors of the Division of Narcotic Enforcement."

It thus is apparent that the district attorney had no authority, and has no authority, to make arrests. His sole duty as our district attorney, generally, is that of a prosecuting officer, presenting cases in court for the people. The taking of James to a private house under the circumstances was an act of kidnaping. (Section 207 of the California Penal Code.) (People v. Ogden, 103 Cal. App. Dec. 442, 107 P. (2d) 50.) It was in any event a lawless act radically inconsistent with our free constitutional American Government, designed to give every citizen the right of an opportunity to prepare his defense, to present it in a court, free of passion or prejudice, and to preserve inviolate the liberty of each individual until he has been lodged in a public jail on a charge legally made.

Instead, the course here pursued is similar to the methods of dictator countries, the rack, the torture chamber, the thumbscrew, and other means of extorting from the innocent a confession to suit the whims and wishes of a prosecutor.

It was conceded by counsel for the respondent that the petitioner did not sleep for twenty-four hours, but the record shows, from the testimony of Scott Littleton, that the petitioner did not sleep at any time during the forty-eight hours (R. 783) that it was admitted he was held in the private house, and, according to a magazine article written by Scott Littleton, it was at least sixty hours that he did not sleep and was subjected to this torture. The magazine article referred to is set forth on pages 824 to 826 of the record, and in part reads as follows:

> "Meanwhile we went around and around with him about the death of his wife. For nearly sixty hours we kept him awake, taking turns questioning him."

The following acts of third degree were shown by the record to have occurred in the horror chamber which the respondent called "the house next door."

1. James was kept incommunicado for a period of from forty-eight to sixty hours;

2. He was shown a dictograph for its psychological effect;

3. He was admittedly struck by Officer J. C. Southard, in charge of the investigation;

4. He received a hernia;

5. He was made black and blue from the waist up;

6. He was made hard of hearing by being beaten about the ears;

7. He was incessantly questioned;

8. Officers questioned him in relays, two of them taking turns while two others slept in comfortable beds nearby;

9. At no time was he permitted to sleep during at least the first forty-three hours, and finally he fell over in his chair from sheer exhaustion, and slept for a period of from three to five hours (R. 782, 783);

10. He fainted from exhaustion;

11. The district attorney personally, and his special deputy and others took turns in questioning him at the district attorney's office when they thought the time was ripe for him to make a statement;

No Arraignment as Required by Law.

12. He was not arraigned before the nearest and most accessible magistrate, as required by law;

13. He was not charged with or arraigned for the murder of his wife for seventeen days after his being taken into custody;

Confined in "High Power" Tank.

14. When finally taken to jail he was placed in a "High Power" tank and kept there during the entire period of incarceration in which this inquisition occurred—after he had left the horror house next door;

The "Third Degreed" Implied Confession From Silence.

15. On May 2, 1936, he was taken from the high power tank to the Chaplain's office in the jail (R. 620); he was without friends or counsel at the time (R. 621). The assistant chief deputy district attorney who had been constantly interrogating him in the horror house, now made a statement to him that the co-defendant had said he, James, had killed his wife (R. 630). A stenographer was present taking down what was purportedly said (R. 630). The stenographer was a deputy sheriff. At the conclusion of the statement by the assistant chief deputy district attorney the defendant was asked if he had anything to add. He replied, "Nothing" (R. 631). This statement that he had "nothing to add" was, over objections (R. 627) that it was not free and voluntary, placed in evidence against him as an admission by silence of guilt (R. 627, 631);

No Food. Then the Psychological Third Degree.

16. He was taken from the jail without his consent and without being given any food (R. 670) and brought to the scene of the fish pond in the back of his home, where his wife had been found dead, at which time he had been so stunned and overcome with grief that the experience required calling a doctor who administered first aid to him (R. 42) and was subjected to the shock of viewing the tragic place. The chief deputy district attorney was there and a large number of newspaper men and investigators (R. 670). The purpose of this trip was obviously a psychological third degree. After keeping him at this scene for some time he was returned to the district attorney's office (R. 673). An intense, persistent and determined interrogation continued (R. 675). "There was questioning for several hours" (R. 675);

At Midnight He Begged "Give Me Something to Eat."

17. He was given no food (R. 670);

18. Shortly before midnight he said he was hungry and asked the officers to take him out and buy him something to eat (R. 633, 588);

No Denial That the District Attorney Threatened Him.

19. His testimony that the district attorney had threatened and browbeat him is undisputed and uncontradicted. It was only after he was fed that he made statements which he had been told over and over again to say if he wanted to prevent further torture;

20. It was Saturday afternoon when he was thus removed from the jail and unlawfully tortured and questioned;

21. After being given a meal James says he repeated what "they told me to say"; the story told was fantastic, but what the district attorney wanted (and repeated over and over again) (R. 735);

22. From the very earliest time during the day when he was removed from the jail he had requested that his attorney be sent for, and was told that his attorney was out of the city for the weekend. The inquisition was not delayed until his attorney could be present. He requested that another attorney be sent for, but this was refused. He was thus without friends and advisors (R. 621-624);

The Alleged "Confession" Started at 1:55 A. M., After Undenied Threats, Questioning and Browbeating.

23. The inquisition took place in the early hours of the morning, when one's resistance is known to be lowest (R. 640-641), and after he had been without food all day, had been given a psychological third degree at the scene of the fish pond, and had been repeatedly and incessantly questioned, according to the admissions of the officers themselves, and after he had been browbeaten by the district attorney and accused in the presence of and by his co-defendant who was being extended leniency for his aid to the prosecution;

The Presumption of Fear From Previous Violence, Threats and Mistreatment Not Overcome.

24. James testified he was still suffering from fear of the mistreatment he had received at the horror "house next door," where he was tortured for from forty-eight to sixty hours with beatings and lack of sleep and food. No evidence was produced to overcome the logical and legal presumption that he was not still so suffering from that fear.

The District Attorney Without Authority to Seize Petitioner and Hold Him in Private House.

The violations of due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States may therefore be grouped as follows:

1. The unlawful and unauthorized seizure of petitioner by the district attorney without warrant or authority of law, and the holding of him in the horror house next door to his home where admittedly force and violence were used upon him. This misconduct comes under the ban of due process of law as set forth in Chambers v. Florida, 309 U. S. 227, 84 L. Ed. 716, Brown v. Mississippi, 297 U. S. 278, 80 L. Ed. 672, Canty v. Alabama, 309 U. S. 629, 84 L. Ed. 988, and Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 557, 42 L. Ed. 568.

The misconduct of a prosecutor does not consist merely of unlawful, unauthorized methods in the courtroom, but in his conduct prior thereto which results in the use or production of unlawful or unauthorized evidence.

Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 102, 79 L. Ed. 792;
Chambers v. Florida, 309 U. S. 277, 84 L. Ed. 716.

The deprivation of sleep not only in the horror house, where Officer Scott Littleton says he never saw him sleep (R. 782, 783), but also on the day and night when the alleged confession was secured, it having been taken down between 1:30 and 3:00 A. M., when persons are normally in bed, shows the persistent, determined, exhaustive third degree methods used on the petitioner and comes under the ban of Ziang Sung Wan v. U. S., 266 U. S. 1.

Use of Silence on Advice of Counsel as Implied Admission of Guilt.

2. It was a violation of petitioner's constitutional rights to take him from the high power tank to an office called the Chaplain's office in the jail, and there, without friends or counsel being present, make a hearsay statement to him that he had been accused by his co-defendant of killing his wife, and upon his failure to "add" anything to the statement made to him by the chief deputy district attorney—use this statement and petitioner's failure to add anything as an implied admission of guilt.

Petitioner had been instructed by counsel not to make any statements unless counsel was present. At that time petitioner was without the benefit of counsel being present, although the district attorney well knew who his counsel was and did not notify or advise counsel. Defendant had already been subjected to cruel third-degree methods; he had been beaten; he had been kicked; he had suffered a hernia; he had been deprived of the right of counsel at the time of his arrest and for many days thereafter; he had been held in an unauthorized manner by the district attorney and questioned for several hours by the chief deputy district attorney in the horror house; he had been held since that time in the "high power" tank; he had been threatened with further mistreatment if he persisted in denying guilt. And he was under no legal duty to speak and his attorney had instructed him not to do so unless the latter was present.

As stated in People v. Pfanschmidt, 262 Ill. Rep. 449:

> "If the accused says he refuses to answer because he is acting under the advice of counsel, or for any other valid reason, the evidence should not be admitted (Jones on Evidence, 2d ed. sec. 289; People v. Conrow, 93 N. E. Rep. 943; O'Hearn v. State, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 542, note; People v. Kessler, 44 Pac. Rep. 97. See also Slattery v. People, 76 Ill. 217.) In discussing the principles underlying this rule, the late Mr. Justice Brown of the United States Supreme Court, said in Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591: 'If an accused person be asked to explain his apparent connection with a crime under investigation, the case with which the questions put to him may assume an inquisitorial character, the temptation to press the witness unduly, to browbeat him if he be timid or reluctant, to push him into a corner, and to entrap him into fatal contradictions, which is so painfully evident in many of the earlier State trials, * * * made the system so odious as to give rise to a demand for its total abolition. * * * So deeply did the iniquities of the ancient system impress themselves upon the minds of the American colonists, that the States with one accord made a denial of the right to question an accused person a part of their fundamental law, so that a maxim which in England was a mere rule of evidence became clothed in this country with the impregnability of a constitutional enactment.' (Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532.) There is no basis in this record to support an argument that plaintiff in error in any manner acquiesced in the truth of the statements or assertions made in his presence in these various interviews. Would any reasonable man in like circumstances, when he had been advised by his attorney time and again not to talk, be expected to reply to accusations of the kind made in these interviews? Manifestly not."

Fear Once Instilled is Presumed to Continue.

Petitioner desires further to argue and present to this Honorable Court the doctrine that fear once instilled in the mind of an accused is presumed to continue, and the burden is upon the prosecution to overcome this presumption.

This doctrine is set down in the following cases:

People v. Johnson, 41 Cal. 452, 455;
State v. Roberts, 1 Dev. 259;
Peter v. State, 4 Sm. & Marsh. 3;
State v. Gould, 5 Halstead 163;
Deatheridge v. State, 1 Sneed 75;
2 Russ on Crime, 834;
1 Wharton Am. Cr. Law, Sec. 694.

This presumption was never overcome.

In People v. Conroy, 200 N. Y. 356, 93 N. E. 943, the Court again approved the doctrine we have set forth herein.

Also, see Cota v. U. S., 25 F. (2d) 299.

If the right to have counsel is sedulously safeguarded under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States (Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45) then the right to follow that counsel's instructions without having it used against one as an implied admission of guilt must necessarily be protected under the 14th Amendment. If one may nevertheless adhere to his constitutional right to remain silent upon the instructions of counsel, and then have that very fact used as an implied admission of guilt, then the constitutional guarantee has been nullified.

We desire further opportunity to present and argue this phase of the case.

The Psychological Third Degree.

3. The third phase of violation of due process of law was the taking of petitioner to the scene of the fish pond, where his wife Mary Emma James was found dead (R. 670-672). It appears that the chief deputy district attorney, Mr. Williams and a large number of newspaper men were present (R. 670).

Mr. and Mrs. Pemberton testified that when James' wife was found dead James suffered great shock (R. 421); that he knelt beside the body; that he was crying all the time (R. 43); that he was terribly upset, he was sick and nauseated (R. 44), and a doctor had to be called to administer aid to him.

Mr. and Mrs. Pemberton (Mrs. Pemberton being Viola Lueck, a close friend of Mrs. James) also testified that James' conduct toward Mrs. James had at all times previous thereto been affectionate and loving (R. 48).

The effect of this proceeding was to induce a confession.

In the case of Davis v. U. S., 32 F. (2d) 860, a confession was obtained from an Indian who had been taken to the morgue beforehand to view his deceased wife. The confession thus obtained was held to be inadmissible. Such procedure is condemned as one of the most vicious forms of third degree. It is a psychological third degree, an attempt to play on the mind and emotions of the accused and to stampede him into submission through anguish and despair.

Early Morning—A Meal for the Hungry Prisoner—Then the "Story".

4. The fourth phase of violation of due process was the repeated and persistent questioning of petitioner in the district attorney's office, without food. When he was first taken out of jail on May 2nd, 1936, he requested that something be bought for him to eat, but the officer with him said there was not time enough for that (R. 670). Later on persons in the district attorney's office all around him ate, while he was not permitted to eat anything, although he saw several others eating sandwiches, but said that he did not get one.

After repeated and persistent questioning and threats by the district attorney (which were never denied by the district attorney) (R., p. 734), at midnight James asked if they would take him out and buy him something to eat on his promise to "tell the story" (R., p. 678)—the early morning purported confession (R., p. 633, 641).

Just as in the cases of White v. Texas, Chambers v. Florida and Canty v. Alabama (supra), where all of the "confessions" were taken down in the early hours of the morning, after a constant browbeating and persistent questioning, so here, the purported confession was taken in the early hours of the morning under similar circumstances. In each of the cases cited the petitioner was surrounded by officers who threatened and browbeat him and otherwise mistreated him.

The Purported Confession Promptly Denied on Court Appearance.

The purported confession of James was promptly denied when he appeared in court thereafter (R. 817).

White Man of the West Entitled to Equal Justice the Same as Negro of the South.

It is true that in each of the other cases decided by this Court the petitioner was a negro, and the unusual argument was made in the hearing herein on February 6th, 1941, that this petitioner "was no negro."

We respectfully submit that petitioner is still entitled to the same protection under the laws and Constitution of the United States as are persons of the negro race, and that the 14th Amendment extends to persons in the West as well as to those in the South and operates alike on all persons similarly situated—whether black, yellow or white.

We desire further opportunity to present and argue these matters and to show that each and all of these things entitle the petitioner in this case to a reversal of the judgment under the 14th Amendment, for, as said in 2 Haukins. Pleas of the Crown (8th Ed.) p. 595, Sec. 34:

> "And as the human mind under the pressure of calamity is easily seduced, and liable, in the alarm of danger, to acknowledge indiscriminately a falsehood or a truth, as different agitations may prevail, a confession, whether made upon an official examination, or in discourse with private persons, which is obtained from a defendant either by the flattery of hope, or by the impressions of fear, however slightly the emotions may be implanted, is not admissible evidence; for the law will not suffer a prisoner to be made the deluded instrument of his own conviction."

II.

THE USE OF TWO LIVE, WRITHING AND HORRIFYING RATTLESNAKES AND A DEAD SNAKE WITH MOUTH AND JAWS OPEN, WAS SOLELY TO BRING ABOUT A VERDICT THROUGH PASSION AND PREJUDICE AND WAS SO INFLAMMATORY IN ITS NATURE AS TO DEPRIVE PETITIONER OF A FAIR AND IMPARTIAL TRIAL GUARANTEED BY THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES. THE SNAKES—CALLED "LIGHTNING" AND "LETHAL" PROVED NOTHING—BUT DID HAVE A LIGHTNING EFFECT ON THE JURY AND LETHAL EFFECT ON THE DEFENDANT. A TRIAL BASED ON PASSION AND PREJUDICE DEPRIVES ACCUSED OF RIGHTS UNDER THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

The bringing in of the two live rattlesnakes, rattling and writhing, eerie and frightening in their nature, and exhibiting them to the jury was for the sole purpose of inflaming the passions and prejudices of the jury. Their use was for the sole purpose of fomenting a state of irremedial hostility and ineffaceable prejudice in the minds of the jurors against the defendant. They did not have any other use. The people were not satisfied with merely bringing in the snakes and exhibiting them in a box to the jury, but countless pages of testimony in the record and proceedings are devoted to the live snakes brought in (but not in any box similar to the type which it is claimed contained the snakes at James' house), and also to the exhibition of a dead snake brought into the courtroom enclosed in a glass jar, with open mouth and fangs projected from the upper jaw. Rattlesnake venom in crystal form and fangs in the primary, secondary and third growth and the manner in which they were attached to the upper jaw, and the method in which the virus is expelled through the fangs, were exhibited and explained to the jury in much detail. The ways and habits, kinds and species, longevity in captivity, the manner in which they obtain their food, how and why they coil and strike, and the physical structure of reptiles of the crotalidae family, and the excruciating pain the victim suffers as the subtle poison stealthily creeps through the circulatory system were meticulously discussed by naturalists, zoologists, entomologists and herpetologists, who had earned their degrees at venerable American and European universities. Three or four lay experts who had gained their knowledge of reptile habits from practical experience on the desert and in habitats where snakes are most abundant, added hundreds of pages to the record which could not have assisted the jury in the remotest degree in their consideration of the case.

The snakes were called "Lightning" and "Lethal" by the prosecution. They were lightning in their effect on the jury and lethal on the defendant.

The sole purpose in presenting all these matters was to inflame the passions and prejudices of the jury. They could in no way aid in enabling the jury to arrive at the facts in the case—alleged murder by drowning—and their sole object was to harrow the feelings and excite the passions and prejudices in the minds of the triers of the facts.

Snakes Eerily Sound Rattles.

Uncontroverted affidavits show that the rattlesnakes in the box were sounding their rattles as they were carried down the aisle. The horrifying effect of these exhibits was apparent.

To what extent a case may be tried on the basis of passion and prejudice and to what extent physical evidence, which serves no evidentiary purpose other than to inflame the passions and pejudices of the jury, may be brought into the courtroom, is an issue that we would like to present further to this Honorable Court.

This Court has said, in Chambers v. Florida, 309 U. S. 227, 84 L. Ed. 716, that a trial must be free of passion and prejudice. Prejudice is a state of mind founded in passion and not in reason.

In State v. McAfee, 64 N. C. 339, at p. 340, cited with approval in Aldrich v. U. S., 283 U. S. 308, 318, 75 L. Ed. 1057, the Court said:

> "It is essential to the purity of trial by jury that every juror shall be free from bias. If his mind has been poisoned by prejudice of any kind, whether resulting from reason or passion, he is unfit to sit on a jury." (Italics added)

In that case the question involved was merely whether one had a right on voir dire to examine jurors as to whether they had any prejudice and should sit on the jury. There, the defendant still had the right to exclude the jurors. But in the case at bar the jurors were already selected and the trial was in progress. How much more important, therefore, to exclude from the courtroom any evidence that would poison, by prejudice of any kind, the mind of a juror already selected and sitting! If a juror whose mind has been poisoned by prejudice of any kind is unfit to sit on a jury, how much more important it is to set aside a verdict where the jury, already sitting, is influenced by prejudicial, inflammatory matter, which poisons his mind.

There are some things of which this Court can take judicial knowledge. One is the native fear in the human being of rattlesnakes. The mere sight of these venomous vipers instills into the heart of the average human being a horror that is hard to erase.

The question was asked in oral argument as to whether the snakes were brought into court in a box similar to that claimed to have been used by the petitioner. They were not brought into court in such a box. A special box was fixed up and brought into court, and it was not a similar

box. There was no demonstration. Nothing was shown to the jurors except the live snakes, writhing and rattling in the box. The snakes had no evidentiary value whatsoever. Yet pages upon pages of the record were devoted to the sinister, slimy, creepy, effect of rattlesnake poison upon a human being, with an Orson Wells effect upon the jury.

This was no trial appealing to reason based on evidence. It was a drama, appealing solely to passion. The deceased died of drowning. Yet, as pointed out in the able dissenting opinion of the late Justice Seawell of California, "What part James took in accomplishing her death by drowning is left to speculation and conjecture." (R. p. 984.)

In Commonwealth v. Carl, 87 Pa. Sup. Ct. 110, the Court excluded the exhibition of a live dog alleged to be dangerous and vicious, in a trial for harboring a nuisance. The Court there pointed out that it added no evidentiary value to the case.

In the following cases the use of objects not necessary to prove the case was held to be inadmissible:

Dozier v. State, 82 Tex. Cr. Rep. 321, 199 S. W. 287;
Lucas v. State, 50 Tex. Cr. Rep. 219, 95 S. W. 1055;
Grace v. State, 88 Tex. Cr. Rep. 301, 225 S. W. 751;
State v. Guffy, 30 S. D. 548, 210 N. W. 980;
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Pearson, 97 Ala. 211, 12 So. 176;
Perry v. Metro. St. Ry. Co., 68 App. Div. 351, 74 N. Y. S. 1;
Newman v. State, 85 Tex. Cr. Rep. 556, 213 S. W. 651;
See also, Sutherland v. State, 24 Ala. App. 573, 139 So. 110.

In Sutherland v. State, 24 Alabama Appellate Reports, 573, 139 So. 110, the Court said:

> "Waiving for the time being the insistence of appellant's counsel that the coat was not properly identified as having been worn by defendant at the time of the homicide and the blood as having been that of the dead man, these two articles—the coat with the blood spot and the can of blood—before such objects may be legally admitted in evidence it must be made to appear that they have some tendency to prove or disprove some disputed or material issue, to illustrate or elucidate some other relevant fact or evidence, to corroborate or disprove some other evidence offered or to be offered. They must have some tendency to shed light upon some material inquiry. It is the duty of the trial court to confine evidence to points in issue in order that the attention of the jury may not be distracted from such matters, by the exhibition of ghastly objects which appeal to the senses and add nothing to the proof. As was said in L. & N. R. R. v. Pearson, 97 Ala. 211, 12 So. 176, 180, 'Sympathy or indignation, once aroused, in the average juror, readily becomes enlisted to the prejudice of the person accused as the author of the injury.' The coat and the can of blood added nothing to the proof already made and could have had but one effect, and that was to arouse the senses of the jurors against this defendant. The articles should have been excluded. Boyette v. State, 215 Ala. 472, 110 So. 812; Crenshaw v. State, 207 Ala. 438, 93 So. 465; Rollings v. State, 160 Ala. 82, 49 So. 329. In Hyche v. State, 22 Ala. App. 176, 113 So. 644, and Patterson v. State, 23 Ala. App. 428, 126 So. 420, the decisions on this point have been limited and clarified so that when the articles offered are relevant and aid in the proof being made they are admissible, but not otherwise."

Demonstrative Evidence Only Admissible When It Demonstrates Something. The Snakes Demonstrated Nothing.

The use of physical objects in evidence is only permissible when it serves to demonstrate. It is called "demonstrative" evidence. When, however, it demonstrates nothing, it is inadmissible. Here the snakes demonstrated nothing to the jury and their use as means of inflaming the passions and prejudices of the jury was violative of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

We desire to show that the use of such evidence violated due process of law as guaranteed by the 14th Amendment, for the use of it was a mere appeal to passion and prejudice and not to reason.

III.

THE USE IN CALIFORNIA OF EVIDENCE BROUGHT FROM THE STATE OF COLORADO BY THE AGENTS OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, WITHOUT ANY NOTICE OR OPPORTUNITY TO DEFEND DEPRIVED THE PETITIONER OF THE FUNDAMENTALS OF DUE PROCESS OF LAW. THE INDICTMENT DID NOT CONTAIN THE NAMES OF THE COLORADO WITNESSES IN ADVANCE NOR WAS PETITIONER NOTIFIED UNTIL THE TRIAL WAS IN PROGRESS. A REQUESTED CONTINUANCE WAS DENIED.

A point which we deem of vast importance to which practically no time was devoted during the oral argument because of lack of time, was the question of the use of evidence in the trial in the State of California, which was produced by the State of California from the State of Colorado. The use of this evidence and the manner in which it was produced deprived the petitioner of notice and an opportunity to be heard, both of which rights are fundamental essentials of due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, 77 L. Ed. 158;
Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. Ed. 780;
Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714;
Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. 223, 230.

The Indictment Contained No Names of Colorado Witnesses.

The defendant was charged with the murder of Mary Emma James in Los Angeles County, California. The indictment returned in the case on August 5th, 1935, gave the names of seven witnesses who were brought before the Grand Jury (R. 816). None of these persons were from the State of Colorado, and no notice was received by the accused even to the extent of furnishing the names of any witnesses until after the trial had commenced and was in progress that anyone would be produced from the State of Colorado to testify to an alleged occurrence four years before the date of trial with respect to the death of a former wife of the petitioner.

So fundamental is this right to receive notice of the names of the witnesses in a capital case in advance of trial, that the United States has passed Section 1033 of the Revised Statutes, 18 U. S. C. A., Sec. 562, which provides that when any person is indicted for any capital offense a copy of the indictment and a list of the jurors and witnesses who are to be produced in the trial upon the indictment shall be delivered to the defendant at least two entire days before the trial.

This section of the statute is mandatory on the Government. In the case of Logan v. U. S., 144 U. S. 263, 304, 36 L. Ed. 429, the Court, interpreting provisions of this section said:

> "The provision is not directory only, but mandatory to the government; and its purpose is to inform the defendant of the testimony which he will have to meet, and to enable him to prepare his defense." (Italics added.)

But in the case at bar, not even the names of witnesses from Colorado were furnished the accused by indictment, or by any other means whatsoever, until they took the witness stand in California in the middle of the trial and testified at length to matters alleged to have occurred in Colorado four years prior to the date of trial and in relation to a former wife, Winona James, and not to Mary Emma

James, named as the victim in the indictment against the petitioner.

One witness testified to matters in Colorado which appeared untrue. Petitioner received a letter from a man in Colorado giving this information. The defense requested a continuance of the trial for the purpose of getting this testimony. The request was denied (R. 684-690).

Under such circumstances how could one adequately defend against this evidence or meet it?

California Has No. Provision for a Bill of Particulars.

California's criminal procedure provides for no means of getting a bill of particulars, and no statute requires the prosecutor to give the names of the witnesses whom he intends to call to the defense as is provided by common law and by Federal statutes.

The first notice which the petitioner received was after the trial commenced, and counsel for the accused were in the middle of the trial.

No California Process Available.

No process of the State of California was available to enable him to bring witnesses from Colorado into court. No means were available for him to leave the trial for the purpose of investigating such evidence from the State of Colorado.

If notice and an opportunity to defend means anything in a criminal trial, surely in this case the petitioner was deprived of every notice and every opportunity to defend against this Colorado evidence, which was extremely prejudicial to him. In fact, one-fourth of the trial was devoted to the Colorado evidence and much of the argument to the jury consisted of argument of the Colorado evidence.

In Smith v. O'Grady, 85 L. Ed. 550, this Court said:

> "The petitioner charged that he had been denied any real notice of the true nature of the charge against him, the first and most universally recognized requirement of due process."

In the case of U. S. v. Ashe, 2 F. (2d) 735, two indictments charging murder were found against a man named Zalotta, and consolidated into a single trial. In that case the court held as unfair a consolidation of two murder indictments into a single trial before a single jury. The court there said:

> "With all these evidences of the state's solicitude for the protection of the accused, can it be possible that in the trial itself in which are the issues of life and death, the officers of the state can deprive the prisoner of the essential right to a separate trial on the issue solemnly raised on each indictment? Can they be permitted to mingle and confuse the cases, by making hotchpot of the indictments and issues before a single jury, and jeopardize the life of the prisoner by holding him out as a habitual criminal, denying him his full legal right of challenges, confound the prisoner in his defense, and distract the minds of the jury? Such an invasion of the established course of trial in high felonies rises far above mere irregularity of procedure. The time honored right of a prisoner to a separate trial on each indictment involving his life, which has been recognized for centuries, upheld by the courts as a continuous expression of the consciouness of the people, unchanged in the progress and development of the law, is basic, fundamental, and absolute, and involved in the very conception of free government.
> "If we stop to inquire, Did harm result to the prisoner from such a procedure? the answer is to be found in the verdict." (Italics ours.)

No Notice or Opportunity to Defend.

In the case at bar there were not two separate indictments, but nevertheless, on a single indictment the People of the State of California sought to try the issues in the Colorado matter before a California jury in which no indictment had ever been returned, and in which no notice or opportunity was given to the accused to prepare to meet the charges thus presented without indictment or without any proceedings upon which the accused could properly prepare a defense to the same.

If it was a violation of due process of law to consolidate the two indictments in the case of United States v. Ashe, 2 F. (2d) 735, and present them before a single jury and to deprive the accused of a fair and impartial trial, how much more serious is it where the accused, as in this case, had no other indictment, had none of the benefits of a proper accusation, or some sort of notice and opportunity to defend against it. As said in the Ashe case—"can they (the people) be permitted to mingle and confuse the cases, by making hotchpot of the indictment and issues before a single jury, and jeopardize the life of the prisoner by holding him out as a habitual criminal * * * confound the prisoner in his defense and distract the minds of the jury?"

Jury Distracted From Real Issue. Petitioner Confounded in His Defense Before California Jury in Colorado Evidence.

Surely, in the presentation of this great mass of Colorado evidence the petitioner in this case was jeopardized before this jury, the defendant was confounded in his defense, and the minds of the jury were distracted from the issue of whether the defendant was guilty or innocent of the crime in California to a collateral issue uncharged, unnoticed, and more than a thousand miles away, and for which no defense could be prepared.

So, if the trial before a single jury on two indictments is void for want of due process of law guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, so here, the judgment was necessarily void for trying this petitioner on both the California and Colorado issues before the same jury, confounding the prisoner in his defense and distracting the jury on the sole issue before it.

The production of the Colorado evidence was strongly objected to (R. 257, 261). During the production of this Colorado evidence the defense sought and asked for a continuance to meet at least one phase of the evidence, which apparently was testified to falsely (R. 684-688). Mr. Chief Justice Hughes on oral argument asked questions on this point of one of counsel for the respondent, but the questions were unanswered. When this counsel said he would let the other counsel reply. The other counsel did not reply to these questions. This continuance was denied (R. 688).

Surely if an accused, without notice, without an opportunity to prepare a defense, asks for a continuance (R. 688, 689) to meet evidence which has been presented against him, the denial of that right is the denial of due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment.

California Procedure Does Not Permit Depositions in Homicide Cases.

Another feature of the laws of the State of California is that no provision is made under the laws for the taking of depositions and use of the same in homicide cases. Article I, Section 13 of the California Constitution provides for the taking of depositions in any cases except those of homicide.

Article I, Section 13 provides as follows:

> "In criminal prosecutions, in any court whatever, the party accused shall have the right to * * * have the process of the court to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf and to appear and defend in person and with counsel. * * * The legislature > shall have power to provide for the taking in the presence of the party accused and his counsel, of depositions of witnesses, in criminal cases other than cases of homicide, when there is reason to believe that the witnesses, from inability or other cause, will not attend at the trial." (Italics added.)

When considered in the light of the common law requiring the trial of an accused to take place in the vicinage where the alleged crime was committed (People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 348) it is clear that the Constitution of California intended that in homicide cases all the witnesses must be brought in in person and that the trial must be in the vicinage where the alleged offense took place; otherwise the taking of depositions would not be excluded.

In view of the express provisions of the California Constitution excluding the taking or use of depositions in cases of homicide, the Constitution of California blocks the defense from producing a defense by deposition, and surely there are no processes by which the witnesses could be brought from the State of Colorado to California in response to any of the witnesses which the people brought, nor would there be any opportunity at all, legally, to defend against anything which the people of the State of California produced through the means of vast wealth and resources which the State possesses, and which were not open to the defense, outside of a territory of 100 miles within the area of the vicinage of the alleged offense.

Due to the shortness of time in the original argument none of these matters was presented to this Honorable Court, and they were not touched upon as to this phase in the original briefs on file.

IV.

California's Principal Witness Was One Charles H. Hope, Who Since the Trial Stated He Was Promised

IMMUNITY TO TESTIFY FALSELY AND THAT HE DID TESTIFY FALSELY IN THE TRIAL AT THE REQUEST OF THE PROSECUTION WHO KNEW HIS TESTIMONY WAS "ALL THE BUNK." THE USE OF TESTIMONY KNOWN TO BE PERJURED VIOLATES DUE PROCESS OF LAW GUARANTEED BY THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

During oral argument no opportunity was afforded to discuss the repudiation by Charles H. Hope of the testimony that he gave in the case, which testimony he stated was entirely perjured, was obtained by deceit, fraud, collusion and coercion, and that he was impelled by force and fear, threats and promises; that all these facts, including the falsity of his statements, were known to the prosecution at the time of the trial and even participated in by them, particularly by the district attorney himself.

These startling assertions are uncontradicted. Their truth is thus conceded.

This Court has had occasion to state in Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 102, 79 L. Ed. 794, that the use of perjured testimony in the trial of a criminal case is violative of due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. This doctrine is again approved in Jones v. Comm., 97 Fed. (2d) 335, 339.

In Chambers v. Florida, 309 U. S. 227 it appeared that three other co-defendants in addition to Chambers—Jack Williamson, Charlie Davis and Walter Woodward—had confessed and their statements were being used against Chambers; that the confessors had been threatened and questioned, and that they did not have the opportunity to employ counsel. This Court reversed the judgments in that case for want of due process.

In the present case the witness Hope (like the witnesses Williamson, Davis and Woodward in the Chambers case), repudiated his confession and plea and he filed affidavits in which he stated as follows:

> "Affiant avers that from the very inception of said proceedings, from the time of his arrest on continuously throughout the trial and until very recently, he has been and was subjected by the investigators and deputies of the district attorney's office of Los Angeles County, acting for said Plaintiff State, as officials of such, to a constant pressure of fear and threats, and that he was induced by said fear and threats and by false promises to make the statements and to give the testimony against himself and co-defendant which he did give; that from the very moment of his arrest, your affiant protested his innocence and stated that he was not conscious of having committed any crime or having done anything wrong, but that for nearly eighteen days after his arrest and before any attorney was secured or allowed to consult with him, he was held in the private custody of the officers and investigators of the said plaintiff, incommunicado, that he requested an attorney and was refused the right to an attorney and was not allowed to see one; that during that time he was subjected to a constant grilling and drilling in the story which said deputies of the State wanted him to tell; that all of said testimony so given on the trial was by them carefully rehearsed by them to him and he was induced by threats and false promises so to testify.
> "Affiant avers that during said eighteen days, after his arrest, when such statements were being extorted and such agreement to testify being forced upon him, he was taken to the office of the District Attorney, who threatened him in these words:
>
> "'If You Don't Co-operate with Us, Tell the Truth as It Is, I Will Frame You if I Have to.'
> "That said District Attorney (Mr. Buron Fitts) then and there shook his fist in my face and told me if I did not co-operate he would get me if he had to frame me. That your affiant believed said threats and was greatly put in fear thereby, to such an extent, your affiant avers, that his free will and agency were completely destroyed, and he thereafter did as he was bid to do by said prosecuting officials, that is to say, did enter the said plea of guilty, although he was not in fact guilty, and did testify as he was told to by said prosecuting officials, the same being the testimony given by him on the trial.

"That at said time and place, said district attorney further threatened your affiant, 'I'll try you with him and I'll hang you with him if you don't do as you're told.' The above in his office during the investigation. When I asked to see a lawyer, they refused, and said they would get the public defender to represent him, as they said they could 'co-operate.' That this constituted the use of force or offer of force and violence against me. Mr. Robert Stewart, then a deputy district attorney, then present at one such meeting, told Mr. Fitts in my presence, 'You would rather have this case at this time before election than anything on earth. Stop threatening the man and listen to him.'

"Affiant further avers that he was induced to enter said plea of guilty by the above mentioned threats and fear, and by the false promises and false representations on the part of the district attorney made to affiant that if he would enter said plea of 'Guilty', it would be a mere matter of form, and that after the James trial was out of the way, they would then extend him leniency and recommend same and that they would allow the court to hear and decide from affiant's evidence that affiant had not been guilty of any crime, or if he had become involved in some unknown manner in not fully or properly reporting his knowledge, that he would be found guilty of such minor misdemeanor only, and that he would be given full opportunity to defend and present any and all evidence; that affiant did not understand that he was entering a plea of Guilty to Murder in any degree or to homicide in any degree; that your affiant was not and is not guilty of murder or manslaughter, either as a principal or accessory before or after the fact, and that whatever he did he did in good faith and without criminal intent and without knowledge of wrongdoing if there was any, which is the substance of his repeated statements to the district attorney and upon the basis of which it was agreed between the parties that the court should enter its decision; that it was never in contemplation of affiant's mind that he would plead guilty to murder or be found guilty thereof. That said promises and agreements were believed and relied upon by affiant; that they were false, were known to be false by the district attorney and his agents and were knowingly made with the intent to deceive and mislead this affiant and to induce him to enter said plea of guilty, and that the same did have that effect. That upon the conclusion of James trial, your affiant was given no opportunity to defend such as he had anticipated and as he had been promised; the foregoing promises were broken and your affiant was summarily found guilty of murder in the first degree and thereafter sentenced for same. That the foregoing facts and other facts which affiant will adduce in support hereof constitute fraud on the part of the prosecuting officials and render said plea and judgment void * * * (R. 923).

"I was held incommunicado in Glendale, brought from there to Grand Jury Room (had never seen a lawyer) and told by Jack Southard that I would be told in the 'room' that I had rights but that I had better disregard that and tell the story that they had given me and that had been gone over by them with me hundreds of times (R. 926).

"Affiant further avers:

"During James trial as I was preparing to take the stand, Southard told me it was absolutely necessary to say I saw the snake bite the woman, I refused. He said I would at least have to say the snake struck at the woman. He explaining that I should say this not that I did not know. He further stated to me, 'You'd better! You're not out of this yourself yet' (R. 927).

"The further part of the District Attorney in not allowing my day in court and setting degree after my plea without defense promised and until after I had testified and holding a death threat over me if I did not" (R. 927).

In another affidavit Hope averred (R. 932):

"Affiant avers that said state prosecuting officials practiced collusion on the court and jury in attempts to give credence to the State's theories and case (quoting from dissenting opinion, 339 to 469) 'if death was in fact caused by an attempt to perform an abortion, he would not have thrown away an opportunity to avail himself of that defense', and practiced collusion also by the false representations upon the trial to the court and jury that affiant's testimony was free and voluntary and not exacted by promises of immunity but 'having been moved solely by the promptings of conscience, and not at all induced by promises or understandings', as pointed out to be material by the Supreme Court at p. 403 of said Opinion; and that as a part of said practice of deceit, deception and collusion, one of said court officials, as a part of such prearrangement and design to improperly influence the jury and to further this deception, could hardly control himself when Judge Fricke went off half-cock and found me guilty of first degree murder, but dashed by me on the stairs, unlocked the jury door and told the jury then deliberating James' case that mine had been set at first degree murder.' That this was part of the pre-conceived plan to improperly influence a verdict and was done in order to lend credence, and to dissipate suspicion that the thing was not wholly above-board but induced by promises and as the result of collusion and a collusive understanding and connivance between the state prosecuting officials and affiant."

Again he averred: (R. 934)

"I aver that said plea of guilty, said testimony on the trial by me, my statements to the prosecuting officials before and at the trial, and the said judgment were all secured by said state prosecuting officials by the practice of deception and fraud by the said officers on the court and jury and upon me; I aver that the said plea of guilty and said judgment and said false testimony were all procured and induced by said state prosecuting officials by the exercise of intimidation upon me. I further aver that I informed representatives of said district attorney before and after the trial in substance as follows: "That stuff about snakes is the bunk: the snake never bit the woman and you know it. That the said snakes were first introduced into the picture by the investigators of the district attorney's staff, and as affiant earnestly believes had nothing to do with the cause of death.

"I do therefore intend to and do hereby revoke and repudiate all of said statements and testimony as having been induced by fraud, duress by threats of hanging and imprisonment, and fear, and as not having been free and voluntary, and as having also been induced by false promises of immuity and release made by said state prosecuting officials to me, which have never been kept, and do further aver that said state prosecuting officials even up to within a short time ago, to wit, November, 1938, at San Quentin, California, repeated to me their promises and said to me, 'We will keep our word: You keep quiet.'; affiant avers that thereafter said state prosecuting officials wrote a letter to a chaplain at the prison, repudiating their promises and denying same and stating they would oppose any effort affiant makes to upset the case;

"As a specific instance of intimidation and duress inducing said false testimony, affiant avers that just before going into the court-room to testify, the state investigators threatened him, saying: Now you be damn sure that you swear that the snake struck at the woman and bit her foot, also, Be sure you testify that we have made you no promises, and that the snake struck at the woman's foot—you are not out of this yourself, and thereby sought to and did put affiant in fear and thereby attempted to and did induce him falsely to testify that those were the facts; that affiant was thereby put in fear by said threats and intimidation and solely because of fear and said promises, he testified as to the snake incident, falsely, against his will and wish, and over his protest to said district attorney and his staff that it was not true in so far as him being an eye-witness. (R. 935)

"Affiant avers that for many hours and days at a time he was subjected by said state prosecuting officials to a persistent course of threats and insistence that he give false testimony and testimony as above mentioned which he told them was not true, which affiant knew to be untrue, and which they knew to be untrue and knew that affiant knew it to be untrue, to remedy certain defects in their case * * *."

Hope's affidavits were uncontradicted. They aver that his testimony was perjured, that it was known to be perjured, and that it was manufactured and framed by the prosecution; that in return for giving it he was promised the utmost leniency. The record shows that he did receive leniency.

In their reply, the respondent said that the Supreme Court of California, had a right to summarily deny the writ after examining the affidavits.

Such procedure was followed in the Federal courts of the Ninth Circuit (California), but since the hearing on this cause, this Honorable Court in Walker v. Johnson, 85 L. Ed. 517, through Mr. Justice Roberts, reversed the procedure and held that "if he was deceived or coerced by the prosecutor into entering a guilty plea" he was denied a constitutional right. We contend that the use of testimony of a codefendant based upon coercion or deception and averred to be perjured violated petitioner's rights under Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103.

In Jones v. Commonwealth, 97 F. (2d) 335, 338, it is said:

"The concept of due process as it has become crystallized in the public mind and by judicial pronouncement, is formulated in Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S.

103, 112, 55 S. Ct. 340, 341, 342, 79 L. Ed. 791, 98 A. L. R. 406. Its requirement in safe-guarding the liberty of the citizen against deprivation through the action of the state embodies those fundamental conceptions of justice which lie at the base of our civil and political institutions, referred to in Hebert v. Louisiana, 272 U. S. 312, 316, 317, 47 S. Ct. 103, 71 L. Ed. 270, 48 A. L. R. 1102. This requirement cannot be satisfied By mere notice and hearing if a state has contrived a conviction through the pretense of a trial which in truth is but used as a means of depriving a defendant of liberty through a deliberate deception of court and jury by the presentation of testimony known to be perjured. Such a contrivance by a state to procure the conviction and imprisonment of a defendant is as inconsistent with the rudimentary demands of justice as is the obtaining of a like result by intimidation. If it be urged that the concept thus formulated but condemns convictions obtained by the state through testimony known by the prosecuting officers to have been perjured, then the answer must be that the delineated requirement of due process in the Mooney Case embraces no more than the facts of that case require, and that the fundamental conceptions of justice which lie at the base of our civil and political institutions must with equal abhorrence condemn as a travesty a conviction upon perjured testimony if later, but fortunately not too late, its falseness is discovered, and that the state in the one case as in the other is required to afford a corrective judicial process to remedy the alleged wrong, if constitutional rights are not to be impaired."

These affidavits were uncontradicted.

As grounds for rehearing it is extremely important that we argue these matters, unargued in the hearing on February 6, 1941.

Furthermore, since the oral argument in this case this Court has handed down a decision in the case of Walker v.

Johnson, 85 L. Ed. 517, in which the Court upheld the right of a petitioner to be heard upon an accusation of a denial of constitutional rights, that is to say, that he was denied the right of counsel at the time he entered his plea of guilty.

In that proceeding the government denied that the petitioner was deprived of his constitutional rights and traversed the matters set forth by him showing his alleged denial. The Court below treated the matter in a summary fashion and denied the petitioner a hearing. This Honorable Court stated that this served but to raise a material issue of fact, and stated:

> "If he was deceived or coerced by the prosecutor into entering a guilty plea he was deprived of his constitutional right and should be heard" (85 L. Ed. 521).

Hope's Affidavits That He Committed Perjury Undenied.

In the case at bar there was no denial of the affidavits of Hope and thus no issue was raised, and where, as here, no issue is raised, the denial of the constitutional right of petitioner herein by reason of the matters set forth in Hope's affidavits, entitles him to a reversal of the judgment, and we desire to be heard further in connection therewith.

Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 102.

A judgment based on perjured testimony is void.

Mooney v. Holohan, supra.

Any judgment resulting from unconstitutional procedure is void.

Johnson v. Zerbst, 82 L. Ed. 1461;

Re Nielsen, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. Ed. 118;

Moore v. Dempsey, 261 U. S. 86, 92, 67 L. Ed. 543.

V.

THE PETITIONER WAS DENIED THE RIGHT OF COUNSEL, AND THEREFORE DUE PROCESS OF LAW GUARANTEED BY THE 14TH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

The petitioner, from the very outset, stood in great peril of his life. The State planned to take it and hurled serious accusations against him. He was therefore entitled to the benefit of counsel from the very moment of his arrest.

Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45.

It is not denied that he was taken by the district attorney to a house next door and held incommunicado.

It is not denied that he was not booked in the jail of Los Angeles County, as required by law.

It is not denied that Los Angeles County had a magistrate available for arraignment of James, including night courts, and that upon his arraignment it would be the duty of the magistrate to send for any counsel in the county which petitioner might name. (Article I, Section 8, Constitution of California.)

But it was not the thought of the district attorney that this petitioner should be allowed the right and benefit of counsel. Nor was there any showing by the people, upon whom the burden rested, that petitioner had that opportunity for some days thereafter.

When the assistant chief deputy district attorney handling the investigation went to the county jail on May 2nd, 1936, he then knew that petitioner had seen counsel, but in the face of that knowledge he proceeded without notifying defense counsel with methods which are proscribed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to hurl grave and serious accusations against the petitioner, and to use petitioner's silence in the absence of said counsel as an implied admission of guilt.

Later the chief deputy district attorney went to the Superior Court and secured a court order for the removal of the petitioner from the jail without advising or notifying counsel for the petitioner and without prisoner's consent. Petitioner was taken to the scene of his wife's death, without the knowledge, advice or benefit of counsel. Later he was brought back to the district attorney's office where he requested that his counsel be sent for, and that counsel not being immediately available because he was two and one-half hours distant from Los Angeles, he requested that another attorney be sent for. Both of these requests were denied.

In Ex parte Chin Loy You, 223 Fed. 833, at 838, the Court said:

> "Why were the ordinary safeguards against injustice refused or ignored? Why was no notice given to the petitioner's counsel that the testimony of the Pennsylvania witness was to be taken? Why was Hop Lee not examined in the proceedings against this petitioner, and offered for cross-examination? Why was the petitioner denied the right of counsel before the first hearing, and at any 'hearing,' until the government's case against him had been completed? These seem to me to be vital questions in considering the fairness of the proceedings; and no answers to them have been suggested by the respondent, except that the officers were not legally obliged to do more than they did."
>
> "It is true that the right to counsel secured by the Constitution (Amendment 6, Sec. 1) relates only to criminal prosecutions; but it is equally true that that provision was inserted in the Constitution because the assistance of counsel was recognized as essential to any fair trial of a case against a prisoner. See, too, Amendment 14."

In Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, this Court, in a lengthy review in that capital case, held that the denial of the right of counsel was a denial of due process of law. In the case at bar the burden was upon the People of the State of California to show that the petitioner had the full benefit of counsel. Such showing was not made by the record. On the contrary, the showing is that the defendant was deprived of counsel and was refused counsel when he asked for it. Under such circumstances his most sacred right was violated.

Due process of law also, under the Constitution and laws of the State of California and Section 849 of the Penal Code, required that the defendant be taken immediately before the nearest and most accessible magistrate in the county. There he was entitled to be arraigned according to the Constitution of the State of California and advised of his right to have counsel immediately. It was to circumvent this express provision of the laws of California that he was detained in a private house, and no counsel was called for him.

As said in Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, 84 A. L. R. 540, 541:

> "What, then, does a hearing include? Historically and in practice, in our own country at least, it has always included the right to the aid of counsel when desired and provided by the party asserting the right. The right to be heard would be, in many cases, of little avail if it did not comprehend the right to be heard by counsel. Even the intelligent and educated layman has small and sometimes no skill in the science of law * * *. He requires the guiding hand of counsel at every step in the proceedings against him. Without it, though he be not guilty, he faces the danger of conviction because he does not know how to establish his innocence. If that be true of men of intelligence, how much more true is it of the ignorant and illiterate, or those of feeble intellect * * *.
> "The state decisions which refer to the matter, invariably recognize the right to the aid of counsel as fundamental in character. E. g., People v. Napthaly, 105 Cal. 641, 644, 39 Pac. 29; Cutts v. State, 54 Fla. 21, 23, 45 So. 491; Martin v. State, 51 Ga. 567, 568, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 536; Sheppard v. State, 165 Ga. 460, 141 S. E. 196; State v. Moore, 61 Kan. 732, 734, 60 Pac. 748; State v. Ferris, 16 La. Ann. 424; State v. Simpson, 38 La. Ann. 23, 24; State v. Briggs, 58 W. Va. 291, 292, 52 S. E. 218."

We respectfully request the further opportunity to be heard to present these matters more fully.

VI.

Each of the Actions of the State, Violative of the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioner, Denied to Him the Equal Protection of the Laws Guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Where a State officer violates fundamental rights guaranteed by the 14th Amendment—where they treat a person differently than all other persons generally situated in the same position, then the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment is violated.

Thus, though a person under arrest is entitled to be free from, and ordinarily is not subjected to third degree brutal methods; is not taken to a private house by the district attorney or his investigators and held incommunicado there but is regularly lodged in jail; is ordinarily given the right and privilege of being arraigned before a magistrate immediately; advised of his right to have counsel, and send for counsel as guaranteed by Article I, Sec. 8 Constitution of California, and advised of and given his other fundamental rights—where State officers deny to a person these fundamental rights, they deny to him the equal protection of the laws.

Although ordinarily trials are conducted upon the basis of an appeal to reason and not to passion and prejudice, where one is treated differently and an appeal is made to inflame the minds of the jurors so that the accused cannot have a fair and impartial trial, he is denied the equal protection of the laws.

Where, ordinarily, a person is tried on evidence producible within the vicinage of the alleged offense and has notice and an opportunity to defend himself against the charges, if one is deprived of those rights and is put in a different category, he is denied the equal protection of the laws.

Thus, when the indictment in this case did not give to the accused any names of any witnesses from the State of Colorado, and no notice was given to him until after the trial had commenced that he might have to defend against matters alleged to have occurred more than a thousand miles away, with no opportunity to defend against them, he was treated differently than other persons in the same or similar situations.

Where, under the Constitution and laws of the United States (Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103; Jones v. Commonwealth, 97 F. (2d) 335, 338) a record shows that an accused person is entitled to have the judgment set aside for a conviction rendered upon perjured testimony, the denial of that right to the petitioner under similar circumstances denies to him the equal protection of the laws.

Where, ordinarily, a person has the right to and is accorded the benefit of counsel from the very inception of arrest and arraignment until the close of his proceeding—a denial to an accused of those rights is a denial of equal protection under the laws.

In the Civil Rights cases, 27 L. Ed. 836, 839, the Court said that the 14th Amendment is prohibitory in character, "it nullifies and makes void * * * state action of every kind, which impairs the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the United States, or which injures them in life, liberty or property without due process of law, or which denies to any of them the equal protection of the laws." (Italics added.)

This section authorizes Congress to provide modes of redress against the operation of State laws, and "the action of State officers, executive or judicial, when these are subversive of the fundamental rights specified in the amendment. Positive rights and privileges are undoubtedly secured by the 14th Amendment; but they are secured by way of prohibition against State laws and State proceedings affecting the rights and privileges." See also, Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 374; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462; Truax v. Corrigan, 257 U. S. 312.

Wherefore, petitioner prays that this cause may be reheard and reversed.

The cases of Chambers v. Florida, 309 U. S. 227; White v. Texas, 310 U. S. 530; Canty v. Alabama, 309 U. S. 629, and Brown v. Mississippi, 297 U. S. 278, each contain but a single violation of due process of law, namely, third degree methods used to extort a confession from the petitioners, which were used in evidence against them. An examination of the records in each of those cases shows that none of the cases is as flagrant as this one. The constant questioning and cross-questioning of the petitioner in this case, the admitted battery committed upon him by a police officer having him in custody, the admitted taking him into a private house by the district attorney without any authority of law, the deprivation of sleep, food and rest, the constant threats and menaces, accusations, questioning and cross-questioning, similar to that conducted in Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 557, 42 L. Ed. 568, surely does not present a picture of a free and voluntary statement admitted by a court of justice in a trial conducted in accordance with a constitution dedicated to the full and equal protection of all citizens according to the law of the land.

This case presents four other highly important violations of rights on the part of the State of California against the accused:

The production of live and dead snakes in the court-room for the sole purpose of inflaming the passions and prejudices of the jury;

The production in evidence from the State of Colorado of matters against which the defendant had no notice or opportunity to defend, regarding the death of a former wife in that State, four years before;

The deprivation of the right of counsel was a denial of fundamental rights guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States (Powell v. Alabama, 287 U. S. 45, 77 L. Ed. 158);

The denial to this petitioner by California of the relief provided by law, namely nullifying the judgment, when it appears that the only witness in the case who testified to facts which in any way involved the charges against the accused has, subsequent to conviction, repudiated his testimony and sworn that the same was false and known by the prosecutor to be false when it was produced in the trial, coupled with the further fact that such sworn repudiations were uncontradicted and, therefore the repudiations are admitted to be and are true.

In no case of which this petitioner's counsel is aware has there ever been a death sentence upheld by this high Court, by an equally divided opinion of the Court, and thus by operation of law.

Petitioner most respectfully prays, therefore, that a rehearing be granted so that a decision may be rendered and that the case may be reversed for the violations of fundamental constitutional rights guaranteed to this petitioner and to all persons in the United States of America by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Respectfully submitted,

MORRIS LAVINE,
Attorney for Petitioner.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1940

No. 134

MAJOR RAYMOND LISENBA,

Petitioner.

vs.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

PETITION FOR REHEARING.

To the Honorable Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and to the Honorable Associate Justices Thereof:

Comes now the petitioner and most respectfully petitions this Honorable Court for rehearing of the cause on habeas corpus, and adopts and incorporates in this petition for rehearing all the points and matters raised in the petition for rehearing of the judgment in cause No. 133, as though herein fully set forth.

Petitioner particularly directs the attention of this Honorable Court, however, to the fact that one point is raised in this petition for rehearing, to-wit, the question of perjury, which we desire to call to this Court's attention as requiring further consideration and determination by this Court.

Since the trial of this case the State's principal witness, Charles H. Hope, has filed two affidavits in this case stating that all his testimony was perjured (R. 920, 922, et seq.). He says in part:

"Affiant avers that during said eighteen days, after his arrest, when such statements were being extorted and such agreement to testify being forced upon him, he was taken to the office of the District Attorney, who threatened him in these words:

That said District Attorney (Mr. Buron Fitts) then and there shook his fist in my face and told me if I did not co-operate he would get me if he had to frame me. That your affiant believed said threats and was greatly put in fear thereby, to such an extent, your affiant avers, that his free will and agency were completely destroyed, and he thereafter did as he was bid to do by said prosecuting officials, that is to say, did enter the said plea of guilty, although he was not in fact guilty, and did testify as he was told to by said prosecuting officials, the same being the testimony given by him on the trial.

"That at said time and place, said district attorney further threatened your affiant, 'I'll try you with him and I'll hang you with him if you don't do as you're told.' The above in his office during the investigation. When I asked to see a lawyer, they refused, and said they would get the public defender to represent him, as they said they could 'co-operate.' That this constituted the use of force or offer of force and violence against me. Mr. Robert Stewart, then a deputy district attorney, then present at one such meeting, told Mr. Fitts in my presence, 'You would rather have this case at this time before election than anything on earth. Stop threatening the man and listen to him.'

"Affiant further avers that he was induced to enter said plea of guilty by the above mentioned threats and fears, and by the false promises and false representations on the part of the district attorney made to affiant that if he would enter said plea of 'Guilty', it would be a mere matter of form, and that after the James trial was out of the way, they would then extend his leniency and recommend same and that they would allow the court to hear and decide from affiant's evidence that affiant had not been guilty of any crime, or if he had become involved in some unknown manner in not fully or properly reporting his knowledge, that he would be found guilty of such minor misdemeanor only, and that he would be given full opportunity to defend and present any and all evidence; that affiant did not understand that he was entering a plea of Guilty to Murder in any degree or to homicide in any degree; that your affiant was not and is not guilty of murder or manslaughter, either as a principal or accessory before or after the fact, and that whatever he did he did in good faith and without criminal intent and without knowledge of wrong doing if there was any, which is the substance of his repeated statements to the district attorney and upon the basis of which it was agreed between the parties that the court should enter its decision; that it was never in contemplation of affiant's mind that he would plead guilty to murder or be found guilty thereof. That said promises and agreements were believed and relied upon by affiant; that they were false, were known to be false by the district attorney and his agents and were knowingly made with the intent to deceive and mislead this affiant and to induce him to enter said plea of guilty, and that the same did have that effect That upon the conclusion of James' trial, your affiant was given no opportunity to defend such as he had anticipated and as he had been promised; the foregoing promises were broken and your affiant was summarily found guilty of murder in the first degree and thereafter sentenced for same. That the foregoing facts and other facts which affiant will adduce in support hereof constitute fraud on the part of the prosecuting officials and render said plea and judgment void * * *" (R. 923).

"I was held incommunicado in Glendale, brought from there to Grand Jury room (had never seen a lawyer) and told by Jack Southard that I would be told in the 'room' that I had rights but that I had better disregard that and tell the story that they had given me and that had been gone over by them with me hundreds of times" (R. 926).

Affiant further avers:

"During James trial as I was preparing to take the stand, Southard told me it was absolutely necessary to say I saw the snake bite the woman, I refused. He said I would at least have to say the snake struck at the woman. He explaining that I should say this and not that I did not know. He further stated to me, 'You'd Better! You're Not Out of This Yourself Yet'" (R. 927).

"The further part of the District Attorney in not allowing my day in court and setting degree after my plea without defense promised and until after I had testified and holding a death threat over me if I did not" (R. 927).

In another affidavit Hope averred (R. 932):

"Affiant avers that said state prosecuting officials practiced Collusion on the court and jury in attempts to give credeace to the State's theories and case (quoting from dissenting opinion, 339 to 469), 'if death was in fact caused by an attempt to perform an abortion, he would not have thrown away an opportunity to avail himself of that defense', and practiced collusion also by the false representations upon the trial to the court and jury that affiant's testimony was free and voluntary and not exacted by promises of immunity but 'having been moved solely by the promptings of conscience, and not at all induced by promises or understandings', as pointed out to be material by the Supreme Court at p. 403 of said Opinion; and that as a part of said practice of deceit, deception and collusion, one of said court officials, as a part of such prearrangement and design to improperly influence the jury and to further this deception, could hardly control himself when Judge Fricke went off half-cock and found me guilty of first degree murder, but dashed by me on the stairs, unlocked the jury door and told the jury then deliberating James' case that mine had been set at first degree murder.' That this was part of the pre-conceived plan to improperly influence a verdict and was done in order to lend credence, and to dissipate suspicion that the thing was not wholly above-board but induced by promises and as the result of collusion and collusive understanding and connivance between the State prosecuting officials and affiant.

Again he averred (R. 934):

"I aver that said plea of guilty, said testimony on the trial by me, my statements to the prosecuting officials before and at the trial, and the said judgment were all secured by said state prosecuting officials by the practice of deception and fraud by the said officers on the court and jury and upon me; I aver that the said plea of guilty and said judgment and said false testimony were all procured and induced by said state prosecuting officials by the exercise of intimidation upon me. I further aver that I informed representatives of said district attorney before and after the trial in substance as follows: 'That stuff about snakes is the bunk: the snake never bit the woman and you know it.' That the said snakes were first introduced into the picture by the investigators of the district attorney's staff, and as affiant earnestly believes had nothing to do with the cause of death.

"I do therefore intend to and do hereby revoke and repudiate all of said statements and testimony as having been induced by fraud, duress by threats of hanging and imprisonment, and fear, and as not having been free and voluntary, and as having also been induced by false promises of immunity and release made by said state prosecuting officials to me, which have never been kept, and do further aver that said state prosecuting officials even up to within a short time ago, to wit, November, 1938, at San Quentin, California, repeated to me their promises and said to me, 'We will keep our word: You keep quiet'; affiant avers that thereafter said state prosecuting officials wrote a letter to a chaplain at the prison, repudiating their promises and denying same and stating they would oppose any effort affiant makes to upset the case;

"As a specific instance of intimidation and duress inducing said false testimony, affiant avers that just before going into the court-room to testify, the state investigators threatened him, saying: 'Now you be damn sure that you swear that the snake struck at the woman and bit her foot', also, 'Be sure you testify that we have made you no promises, and that the snake struck at the woman's foot,—you are not out of this yourself", and thereby sought to and did put affiant in fear and thereby attempted to and did induce him falsely to testify that those were the facts; that affiant was thereby put in fear by said threats and intimidation and solely because of fear and said promises, he testified as to the snake incident, falsely, against his will and wish, and over his protest to said district attorney and his staff that it was not true in so far as him being an eye-witness (R. 935).

"Affiant avers that for many hours and days at a time he was subjected by said state prosecuting officials to a persistent course of threats and insistence that he gave false testimony and testimony as abovementioned which he told them was not true, which affiant knew to be untrue, and which they knew to be untrue and knew that affiant knew it to be untrue, to remedy certain defects in their case. * * *"

Hope's affidavits were uncontradicted. They aver that his testimony was perjured, that it was known to be perjured, and that it was manufactured and framed by the prosecution; that in return for giving it he was promised the utmost leniency. The record shows that he did receive lenience.

In their reply, the respondent said that the Supreme Court of California had a right to summarily deny the writ after examining the affidavits.

Such procedure was followed in the Federal courts of the Ninth Circuit (California), but since the hearing on this cause, this Honorable Court in Walker v. Johnson, 85 L. Ed. 517, through Mr. Justice Roberts, reversed the procedure and held that "if he was deceived or coerced by the prosecutor into entering a guilty plea" he was denied a constitutional right. We contend that the use of testimony of a co-defendant based upon coercion or deception and averred to be perjured violated petitioner's right under Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103.

In Jones v. Commonwealth, 97 F. (2d) 335, 338, it is said:

> "The concept of due process as it has become crystallized in the public mind and by judicial pronouncement, is formulated in Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103, 112, 55 S. Ct. 340, 341, 342, 79 L. Ed. 791, 98 A. L. R. 406. Its requirement in safe-guarding the liberty of the citizen against deprivation through the action of the state embodies those 'fundamental conceptions of justice which lie at the base of our civil and political institutions,' referred to in Hebert v. Louisiana, 272 U. S. 312, 316, 317, 47 S. Ct. 103, 71 L. Ed. 270, 48 A. L. R. 1102. This requirement cannot be satisfied 'By mere notice and hearing if a state has contrived a conviction through the pretense of a trial which in truth is but used as a means of depriving a defendant of liberty through a deliberate deception of court and jury by the presentation of testimony known to be perjured. Such a contrivance by a state to procure the conviction and imprisonment of a defendant is as inconsistent with the rudimentary demands of justice as is the obtaining of a like result by intimidation.' If it be urged that the concept thus formulated but condemns convictions obtained by the state through testimony known by the prosecuting officers to have been perjured, then the answer must be that the delineated requirement of due process in the Mooney Case embraces no more than the facts of that case require, and that 'the fundamental conceptions of justice which lie at the base of our civil and political institutions' must with equal abhorrence condemn as a travesty a conviction upon perjured testimony if later, but fortunately not too late, its falseness is discovered, and that the state in the one case as in the other is required to afford a corrective judicial process to remedy the alleged wrong, if constitutional rights are not to be impaired."

In Chambers v. Florida, 309 U. S. 227, 84 L. Ed. 716, three co-defendants of Chambers were similarly compelled to make false statements, enter pleas of guilty and testify against Chambers. This Honorable Court on proceedings on coram nobis voided the judgments.

The uncontradicted facts herein require a reversal. Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103; Smith v. O'Grady, 85 L. Ed. 548.

The argument made orally by respondent that this appellant is no negro and therefore that the 14th Amendment does not apply to him as to the crop farming negroes in the south is untenable. This seems to be a popular misconception among prosecutors that this case should dispel.

We respectfully pray for a rehearing on all the grounds heretofore raised in the petition and for reversal of the judgment, and order denying petitioner a writ of habeas corpus.

Respectfully submitted,

MORRIS LAVINE,
Counsel for Appellant.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Nos. 4 and 5.—October Term, 1941.

Major Raymond Lisenba, Petitioner,
vs.
The People of the State of California.

On Writs of Certiorari to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

[December 8, 1941.]

Mr. Justice Roberts delivered the opinion of the Court.

The petitioner was convicted of murder and sentenced to death in the Superior Court of California for Los Angeles County. The Supreme Court of California affirmed the judgment March 21, 1939, two judges dissenting.[1] A rehearing was granted, the case was reargued and, October 5, 1939, the decision was reaffirmed and the former opinion adopted and amplified, two justices dissenting.[2] No question arising under the Constitution of the United States had been raised or decided. In a second petition for rehearing the petitioner, for the first time, asserted that his conviction violated the Fourteenth Amendment. November 3, 1939, the Court ruled: "The petition for a rehearing herein is denied."

The Chief Justice of the State allowed an appeal November 6, 1939, and November 8, 1939, executed a certificate in which he enumerated the constitutional questions presented by the second petition for rehearing; stated that the court entertained the petition, and explicitly overruled each of the contentions made therein; certified that the decision denying rehearing "is to be interpreted and considered as holding against the appellant's contention that his rights under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States . . . were violated"; and concluded: "It ordered that this certificate be filed in this court and made part of the record on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States." On the record so made this Court has jurisdiction to review the judgment.[3]

The appellant did not draw in question the constitutional validity of any statute of California. We, therefore, dismissed the appeal[4] but, treating the papers as a petition for certiorari,[5] we granted the writ. This case is No. 4.

October 31, 1939, the petitioner prayed the Supreme Court of California for a writ of habeas corpus on the theory that his trial and conviction had deprived him of his life without due process. He submitted affidavits of one Hope, who had turned state's evidence against him. In these Hope asserted that his testimony was false, had been coerced by threats and induced by promises of leniency and by fraud.

November 9, 1939, habeas corpus was denied, without prejudice. The Chief Justice of California allowed an appeal and made and ordered filed of record, a certificate respecting the constitutional questions presented and decided by the court, similar to that entered in No. 4. We followed the same course as in No. 4 and the case is here as No. 5.

The appeals were presented in forma pauperis. The typewritten record is of great length. In the belief that only by briefs and oral argument, and on a record printed by the court, could proper consideration and decision be had of certain apparently important questions presented, we issued the writs. The cases were argued at the October 1940 term, and the judgments were affirmed by a divided Court. A petition for rehearing before a full Court was granted, the affirmances set aside, and the causes set for rehearing at this term.[6]

The petitioner, who used, and was commonly known by, the name of Robert S. James (and will be so called), and one Hope were indicted May 6, 1936, for the murder of James' wife on August 5, 1935. Hope pleaded guilty and was sentenced to life imprisonment. James pleaded not guilty, was tried, convicted, and sentenced to death. The trial was a long one in which the petitioner made objections to rulings and to the charge, which raise questions of state law decided by the opinion below, with which we have no concern. We shall refer only to so much of the evidence as bears upon the constitutional questions open here.

The State's theory is that the petitioner conceived the plan of marrying, insuring his wife's life by policies providing double indemnity for accidental death, killing her in a manner to give the appearance of accident, and collecting double indemnity.

James employed Mary E. Busch as a manicurist in his barber shop in March, 1935, and, about a month later, went through a marriage ceremony with her, which was not legal as he then had a living wife. While they were affianced, insurance was negotiated on her life, with James as beneficiary. Upon the annulment of the earlier marriage a lawful ceremony was performed. The petitioner made sure that the policies were not annulled by the fact that when they were issued Mary had not been his lawful wife.

The allegation is that James enlisted one Hope in a conspiracy to do away with Mary and collect and divide the insurance on her life. Hope testified that, at James' instigation, he procured rattlesnakes which were to bite and kill Mary; that they appeared not to be sufficiently venomous for the purpose but he ultimately purchased others and delivered them to James; that James, on August 4, 1935, blindfolded his wife's eyes, tied her to a table, had Hope bring one of the snakes into the room and caused the reptile to bite her foot; that, during the night James told Hope the bite did not have the desired effect and, in the early morning of August 5, he told Hope that the was going to drown his wife; that later he said to Hope, "That is that", and still later, at his request, Hope aided him in carrying the body to the yard, and James placed the body face down at the edge of a fish pond with the head and shoulders in the water.

James was at his barber shop on August 5. On that evening he took two friends home for dinner. When they arrived the house was dark and empty, and, upon a search of the grounds, his wife's body was found in the position indicated. An autopsy showed the lungs were almost filled with water. The left great toe showed a puncture and the left leg was greatly swollen and almost black. Nothing came of the investigation of the death.

James attempted to collect double indemnity; the insurers refused to pay; suits were instituted and one of them settled. As a result of this activity, a fresh investigation of Mary James' death was instituted. On April 19, 1936, officers arrested James for the crime of incest. He was booked on this charge on the morning of April 21, was given a hearing and remanded to jail. On May 2 and 3 he made statements respecting his wife's death to the prosecuting officials.

At the trial, in addition to that of Hope, testimony was adduced as to the finding and condition of the body, other evidence to connect James with the death, and expert testimony that the condition of the left leg could be attributed to rattlesnake bites. The purchase of snakes by Hope was proved by him and several other witnesses one of whom said he sold the two snakes to Hope, one of which Hope claimed had bitten Mary James. Two snakes were brought into court which the witness identified as those sold to Hope and by Hope resold to the witness.

James' statements were offered in evidence. Objection was made that they were not voluntary. Before they were admitted the trial judge heard testimony offered by the State and the defendant on that issue. He ruled that the confessions were admissible, and they were received in evidence.

The State offered evidence with respect to the death of a former wife of James in 1932. This tended to prove that, while driving down Pike's Peak, their automobile went off the road. James went for aid. When the persons called upon reached the automobile they found James' wife lying partly outside the car with her head badly crushed and a bloody hammer in the back of the car. James appeared unhurt. The woman recovered from her injuries but, shortly afterwards, was discovered by James and another man drowned in the bathtub in a house James had temporarily leased at Colorado Springs. James collected double indemnity from insurance companies for her death, the insurance having been placed at about the time he married her and her death having occurred within a few months thereafter. This evidence was admitted over objection and, at the close of the State's case, defendant's counsel moved for an adjournment so that they might take depositions of witnesses in Colorado. The court refused the application for want of a sufficient showing.

The petitioner's contentions, based upon the Fourteenth Amendment, are: that the conduct of the prosecuting officials and police officers denied him the equal protection of the laws; that his conviction deprived him of his life without due process, because the testimony of Hope, an accomplice, was not corroborated as required by the Penal Code of California and was, therefore, insufficient to sustain a conviction; because Hope's affidavits filed since the trial showed that his testimony was obtained by deceit, fraud, collusion, and coercion and was known to the prosecutor to be false and hence the trial was a mere pretense; because the alleged occurrences in Colorado were wholly disconnected from the crime charged and petitioner was afforded no opportunity to answer the State's evidence respecting them; because the production of the rattlesnakes in the court was solely for the purpose of inflaming the jury; and because physical violence, threats, and other coercive means produced the confessions, and denial of requested opportunity to consult counsel preceded and accompanied their procurement.

First. The contention that illegal conduct on the part of the State's officers deprived petitioner of the equal protection of the laws hardly needs notice. The claim is that where officers violate the law so that some defendants are treated as was petitioner, and others are treated as the law requires, inequality and discrimination results which denies equal protection. The contention is frivolous. The record is bare of any proof to support it.

Second. The petitioner asserts that Hope's testimony was not corroborated. Under California law, the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not sufficient to sustain a conviction.[7] Petitioner contends that, in consideration of Hope's confessing and turning state's evidence, leniency was extended him by the court. Petitioner says that Hope's affidavits show that the prosecuting officials well knew that Hope's testimony was a fabrication; that he was persuaded so to testify by fraud, promises of leniency and threats, and the trial was a mere sham.[8]

These contentions need but brief notice. The Fourteenth Amendment does not forbid a state court to construe and apply its laws with respect to the evidence of an accomplice. There is no adequate showing that there was a corrupt bargain with Hope, and the practice of taking into consideration, in sentencing an accomplice, his aid to the state in turning state's evidence can be no denial of due process to a convicted confederate. Hope's affidavits not only were prepared after the State Supreme Court had passed upon the case and its opinion had been published but after the lapse of nearly three years from the trial. They could, therefore, be considered only in the habeas corpus case. The State contends that it had no opportunity to answer them. This is contested by the petitioner. In any event, it was stipulated that the record on appeal in the other case should be part of the record on the habeas corpus hearing; and comparison of the testimony at the trial with the allegations of the affidavits raises serious doubts as to their truthfulness. The appraisal of the conflicting evidence was for the court below. Even if its refusal to believe Hope's depositions were erroneous, the error would be no more a denial of due process than was its approval, on appeal, of the trial judge's refusal to direct a verdict on the ground of insufficiency of evidence.

[7] Penal Code § 1111.

[8] Cf. Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103.

Third. Testimony was admitted concerning the death of James' former wife, on the widely recognized principle that similar but disconnected acts may be shown to establish intent, design, and system.[9] The Fourteenth Amendment leaves California free to adopt a rule of relevance which the court below holds was applied here in accordance with the State's law.

The insistence that the trial judge's refusal to grant a continuance, so that petitioner could take answering depositions, was a denial of due process goes even farther afield. Counsel had notice at the opening of the trial, or shortly thereafter, that the State intended to introduce evidence on this subject,—but waited until the State had rested before asking the continuance. Even then the showing was inadequate as to the identity of the witnesses and the nature of the expected evidence. The judge, in the exercise of his discretion, denied the motion. The Fourteenth Amendment gives this Court no mandate to review his action or inquire whether he abused his discretion in such a field.

Fourth. A part of the State's case was that Hope had purchased snakes and brought them to the petitioner in pursuance of the conspiracy. Two snakes were brought into the courtroom to be identified by the witness who said he sold them to Hope. The petitioner says that the sole purpose of the production of the snakes was to prejudice the jury against him and that those in the courtroom, including the jury, were in a panic as a result of the incident. For this he cites current newspaper accounts and affidavits of his counsel. The State denies any improper purpose and, to rebut the assertions of petitioner, relies on a counter-affidavit and a statement by the trial judge. The record discloses that at a subsequent stage of the trial the snakes were brought into court at the defendant's request.

[9] See Wigmore, Evidence (3rd Ed.) Vol. II, § 363.

We do not sit to review state court action on questions of the propriety of the trial judge's action in the admission of evidence. We cannot hold, as petitioner urges, that the introduction and identification of the snakes so infused the trial with unfairness as to deny due process of law. The fact that evidence admitted as relevant by a court is shocking to the sensibilities of those in the courtroom cannot, for that reason alone, render its reception a violation of due process.

Fifth. The important question is whether the use of the confessions rendered petitioner's conviction a deprivation of his life without due process of law. Recital of the relevant facts is essential to a decision.

The petitioner, while having almost no formal education, is a man of intelligence and business experience. After his arrest, on the charge of incest, on the morning of Sunday, April 19, 1936, he was taken for a short time to the adjoining house and shown a dictaphone there installed. He was brought to the District Attorney's offices where he was lodged in the Bureau of Investigation. He says that during the two or three hours he stayed there he was not questioned. He was taken into an office where the District Attorney showed him a statement made by a Miss Wright respecting the incest charge and asked him what he cared to say about it. He replied that he would not talk about it. He was questioned for about an hour. He says he was asked about his wife's death; others who were present deny this.

He was held in the District Attorney's suite until 5 or 6 o'clock, was given supper at a cafe, and then conducted to the house next door to his home, where he arrived about 7 or 7:30. Various officers questioned him there in relays throughout the night concerning his wife's death. He sat in a chair fully dressed and had no sleep. Monday morning he was taken out for breakfast and went with the officers to point out to them a house at 9th and Alvarado Streets, after which he was taken to the District Attorney's offices. He was brought back to the house next door to his home and the questioning was resumed, and continued until about 3 o'clock Tuesday morning when, he says, he fainted, and others present say he fell asleep and slept until 7 or 8 o'clock. After he had breakfasted he was booked at the jail, arraigned before a magistrate, and committed on the incest charge.

James testified that about 10 P. M. Monday, April 20, the officers began to beat him; that his body was made black and blue; that the beating impaired his hearing, and caused a hernia; that later that night an Assistant District Attorney questioned him and that, after this ordeal, he collapsed. It is admitted that an officer slapped his face that night. This is said to have occurred as the result of an offensive remark James made concerning his wife; he denies having made the remark. In corroboration of James' testimony two witnesses said they noticed that one or both of his ears were bruised and swollen when he was lodged in the jail. All of this testimony is contradicted by numerous witnesses for the State, save only that it is admitted James was repeatedly and persistently questioned at intervals during the period from Sunday night until Tuesday morning. It is testified that, except for the one slap, no one laid a hand on James; that no inducement was held out to him; that no threats were made; that he answered questions freely and intelligently; and that he was at ease, cool, and collected. He admits that no promises or threats were made or maltreatment administered on the occasions when he was in the District Attorney's office. It is significant that James stated to one of the other officers that Officer Southard had slapped him and that when, May 2, the District Attorney asked how he had been treated he again referred to the slap. In neither case did he say anything of any other mistreatment. During the period April 19-21 James made no incriminating admission or confession.

James says that shortly after his arrest on Sunday morning he asked, and was refused, permission to get into touch with Mr. Silverman, who had been his attorney for a number of years. This is denied. There is evidence that he saw Mr. Silverman on Monday, April 20, at the District Attorney's office. Mr. Silverman testified that he saw the petitioner immediately after his formal arrest; that he was with the petitioner at the arraignment on Tuesday, April 21st; and again on April 25th in the jail. It is not suggested that James was not allowed to see his attorney as often as he desired or that any obstacle was interposed to the attorney's interviewing him between April 21 and May 2.

There is no claim that from April 21, when he was lodged in the jail, until May 2, he was interviewed, questioned, threatened, or mistreated by anyone. During this period his attorney told him that he would be indicted for his wife's murder and should not answer any questions unless his attorney was present.

May 1, Hope was arrested and made a statement. On the morning of May 2, James was brought from his cell to the chaplain's room in the prison and confronted with Hope. An Assistant District Attorney outlined Hope's story and asked James whether he had anything to say, to which he replied: "Nothing".

He went back to his cell and, about noon, an order of court was obtained to remove him from the prison. He was taken to his former home by two deputy sheriffs. The evidence does not disclose clearly either the purpose or th incidents of this trip. He was then brought to the District Attorn- 's office and that official began to question him. He requested that his attorney be sent for. In his presence a telephone call was made which disclosed that Mr. Silverman was not in Los Angeles. He asked that another attorney be summoned. He states that the District Attorney said it would take too long to acquaint any other attorney with the facts; others say that James did not give the name of the other attorney he wanted and it took some time to discover whom he had in mind. The attorney was not summoned.

The District Attorney and, at times, others questioned James until supper time. Sandwiches and coffee were procured. James says he had coffee but someone took his sandwiches. There is testimony that he had them. The questioning, based on Hope's confession, was continued into the night without James having refused to answer questions or having made any incriminating answers.

There is a sharp conflict as to how the session terminated. James says that Officer Southard, who had struck him on April 20, occupied the room alone with him, all others having left; that the officer told him he had been lying all evening and that if he did not tell the truth the officer would take him back to the house and beat him; that this so frightened him that he agreed to do his best to recite to the District Attorney the same story Hope had told. There is much evidence that no such incident occurred. Deputy Sheriff Killion says that sometime before midnight the others had left petitioner alone with him and that petitioner turned to him and said something to the effect: "Why can't we go out and get something to eat; if we do I'll tell you the story." To this Killion replied that they could go out. Killion and another Deputy Sheriff, Gray, a lady friend, and another person accompanied petitioner to a public cafe where they had a supper and afterwards had cigars. James testified that neither Killion nor Gray nor the District Attorney ever laid hand on him, threatened him or offered him any inducement to confess.

The State's evidence is that after they started to smoke James told a story of which Killion took notes. Killion narrated at the trial what James had told him. The party returned to the District Attorney's office and there, responding to a question by the District Attorney, James said he had told Killion the story and, in answer to questions, he repeated that story. The interview was stenographically recorded. Most of the questions were asked by the District Attorney, some few by Killion and one or two other officers who were present. The group seems to have consisted of the District Attorney, an Assistant District Attorney, two officers, the two deputy sheriffs, and the stenographer.

Hope's statement laid on James the initiation of the murder plot, the attempt to consummate it with snake poison, the drowning and the disposition of her body. The account James gave Killion and the District Attorney, which he now says was an attempt to retell the tale Hope had told, which had been constantly dinned into his ears, is by no means a reiteration of Hope's story. On the contrary, James insisted that Hope suggested the destruction of Mary James, and the rattlesnake expedient, which Hope carried out; that when this failed Hope suggested that he, Hope, burn down the house to make it appear that Mrs. James died by accident, and that Hope also volunteered to commit an abortion on Mrs. James and also to do away with her. James asserted that, while he was absent from his home on the morning of August 5, 1935, Hope drowned his wife in the bathtub and told James that he had done so.

It is also to be noted that James' statement presents a lurid picture of the heavy drinking and intoxication of Hope, James, and Mary James during the three days anterior to the death of the latter. The effort evidently was to suggest that all were more or less irresponsible for their actions.

If Hope's story is true, James planned and accomplished the murder of his wife to obtain the insurance on her life. If James' statement is true, Hope planned the murder, James desired to abandon the scheme and thought that all Hope ultimately intended to do was to commit an abortion on James' wife and was shocked and surprised to learn that Hope had murdered her.

James said during supper at the cafe, and stated on another occasion, that there were not enough men in the District Attorney's office to make him talk, and if Hope had not talked he would never have told the story.

Scrutiny of the two statements indicates that James carefully considered what Hope had said and made up his mind to tell a story consistent with his intimacy with Hope, and with various incidents James could not deny, and then depict a drunken orgy as a result of which his will power was so enfeebled that he could not resist Hope's determination to make away with Mrs. James.

At the trial James contradicted the essential particulars of Hope's testimony and most of his own confession, including the evidence respecting the snakes. He swore all Hope was to do was to attempt an abortion; he believed Hope did not accomplish this and his wife died as a result of falling into the pond in a fainting fit due to her pregnancy.

The evidence as to the treatment of James and the conduct of officials and officers from the moment of his arrest until the close of his statement to the District Attorney was heard preliminarily by the trial judge in order to determine whether the State had, as required by California law, carried its burden of proving the confessions voluntary. The ruling was that it had and the confessions were admitted. The trial judge, at defendant's request, charged the jury, in accordance with the State law, that the confessions must be utterly disregarded unless they were voluntary, that is, not the result of inducements, promises, threats, violence, or any form of coercion.

The failure of the arresting officers promptly to produce the petitioner before an examining magistrate, their detention of him in their custody from Sunday morning to Tuesday morning, and any assault committed upon him, were violations of state statutes[10] and criminal offenses.[11]

We find no authority for the issue of the court order under which the sheriff's deputies took the accused from jail to his former home, and to the District Attorney's office for questioning.[12] The denial of opportunity to consult counsel, re-

[12] The record does not disclose whether the application for the order was in the form of a petition; whether defendant was apprised of the motion for the order; whether he consented to its issue, or what representations were made to the court which granted the order. Section 4004 of the 1941 Code (§ 1600 of the 1935 Code) requires a prisoner committed by a magistrate to be confined in a jail until legally discharged, and declares that if he is permitted quested on May 2nd, was a misdemeanor.[13] It may be assumed this treatment of the petitioner also deprived him of his liberty without due process and that the petitioner would have been afforded preventive relief if he could have gained access to a court to seek it.

But illegal acts, as such, committed in the course of obtaining a confession, whatever their effect on its admissibility under local law, do not furnish an answer to the constitutional question we must decide. The effect of the officers' conduct must be appraised by other considerations in determining whether the use of the confessions was a denial of due process. Moreover, petitioner does not, and cannot, ask redress in this proceeding for any disregard of due process prior to his trial. The gravamen of his complaint is the unfairness of the use of his confessions, and what occurred in their procurement is relevant only as it bears on that issue.

On the other hand, the fact that the confessions have been conclusively adjudged by the decision below to be admissible under State law, notwithstanding the circumstances under which they were made, does not answer the question whether due process was lacking. The aim of the rule that a confession is inadmissible unless it was voluntarily made is to exclude false evidence. Tests are invoked to determine whether the inducement to speak was such that there is a fair risk the confession is false.[14] These vary in the several states.[15] This Court has formulated those which are to govern in trials in the federal courts.[16] The Fourteenth Amendment leaves California free to adopt, by statute or decision, and to enforce such rule as she elects, whether it conform to that applied in the federal or in other state courts. But the adoption of the rule of her choice cannot foreclose inquiry as to whether, in to go at large out of the jail, except by virtue of a legal order or process, this shall constitute an escape. The only statutes we are able to find authorizing an order for the removal of a prisoner from jail are §§ 4011 and 4012 of the Penal Code, 1941, (§§ 1607 and 1608 of the 1935 Code) which provide for cases of individual illness or a general outbreak of pestilence or disease in a prison. Section 4011 permits a removal without court order in case of fire.

a given case, the application of that rule works a deprivation of the prisoner's life or liberty without due process of law. The aim of the requirement of due process is not to exclude presumptively false evidence, but to prevent fundamental unfairness in the use of evidence whether true or false. The criteria for decision of that question may differ from those appertaining to the State's rule as to the admissibility of a confession.

As applied to a criminal trial, denial of due process is the failure to observe that fundamental fairness essential to the very concept of justice. In order to declare a denial of it we must find that the absence of that fairness fatally infected the trial; the acts complained of must be of such quality as necessarily prevent a fair trial. Such unfairness exists when a coerced confession is used as a means of obtaining a verdict of guilt. We have so held in every instance in which we have set aside for want of due process a conviction based on a confession.

To extort testimony from a defendant by physical torture in the very presence of the trial tribunal is not due process. The case stands no better if torture induces an extra-judicial confession which is used as evidence in the courtroom.[17]

A trial dominated by mob violence in the courtroom is not such as due process demands.[18] The case can stand no better if mob violence anterior to the trial is the inducing cause of the defendant's alleged confession.

If, by fraud, collusion, trickery and subornation of perjury on the part of those representing the state, the trial of an accused person results in his conviction he has been denied due process of law.[19] The case can stand no better if, by the same devices, a confession is procured and used in the trial.

The concept of due process would void a trial in which, by threats or promises in the presence of court and jury, a defendant was induced to testify against himself. The case can stand no better if, by resort to the same means, the defendant is induced to confess and his confession is given in evidence. As we have said, "due process of law . . . commands that no such practice . . . shall send any accused to his death."[20]

Where the claim is that the prisoner's statement has been procured by such means we are bound to make an independent examination of the record to determine the validity of the claim. The performance of this duty cannot be foreclosed by the finding of a court, or the verdict of a jury, or both.[21] If the evidence bearing upon the question is uncontradicted, the application of the constitutional provision is unembarrassed by a finding or a verdict in a state court; even though, in ruling that the confession was admissible, the very tests were applied in the state court to which we resort to answer the constitutional question.[22]

There are cases, such as this one, where the evidence as to the methods employed to obtain a confession is conflicting, and in which, although denial of due process was not an issue in the trial, an issue has been resolved by court and jury which involves an answer to the due process question. In such a case we accept the determination of the triers of fact, unless it is so lacking in support in the evidence that to give it effect would work that fundamental unfairness which is at war with due process.

Here judge and jury passed on the question whether the petitioner's confessions were freely and voluntarily made, and the tests applied in answering that question rendered the decision one that also answered the question whether the use of the confessions involved a denial of due process; this notwithstanding the issue submitted was not eo nomine one concerning due process. Furthermore, in passing on the petitioner's claim, the Supreme Court of the State found no violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. Our duty then is to determine whether the evidence requires that we set aside the finding of two courts and a jury and adjudge the admission of the confessions so fundamentally unfair, so contrary to the common concept of ordered liberty as to amount to a taking of life without due process of law.

In view of the conflicting testimony, we are unable to say that the finding below was erroneous so far as concerns the petitioner's claims of physical violence, threats or implied promises of leniency. There remains the uncontradicted fact that on two occasions, separated by an interval of eleven days, the petitioner was questioned for protracted periods. He made no admission implicating him in his wife's death during, or soon after, the interrogations of April 19, 20, and 21. If, without more, eleven days later confessions had been forthcoming we should have no hesitation in overruling his contention respecting the admission of his confessions.

Does the questioning on May 2nd, in and of itself, or in the light of his earlier experience, render the use of the confessions a violation of due process? If we are so to hold it must be upon the ground that such a practice, irrespective of the result upon the petitioner, so tainted his statements that, without considering other facts disclosed by the evidence, and without giving weight to accredited findings below that his statements were free and voluntary, as a matter of law, they were inadmissible in his trial. This would be to impose upon the state courts a stricter rule than we have enforced in federal trials.[23] There is less reason for such a holding when we reflect that we are dealing with the system of criminal administration of California, a quasi-sovereign: that if federal power is invoked to set aside what California regards as a fair trial it must be plain that a federal right has been invaded.

We have not hesitated to set aside convictions based in whole, or in substantial part, upon confessions extorted in graver circumstances. These were secured by protracted and repeated questioning of ignorant and untutored persons in whose minds the power of officers was greatly magnified: who sensed the adverse sentiment of the community and the danger of mob violence; who had been held incommunicado, without the advice of friends or of counsel; some of whom had been taken by officers at night from the prison into dark and lonely places for questioning.[24] This case is outside the scope of those decisions.

Like the Supreme Court of California, we disapprove the violations of law involved in the treatment of the petitioner, and we think it right to add that where a prisoner held incommunicado is subjected to questioning by officers for long periods, and deprived of the advice of counsel, we shall scrutinize the record with care to determine whether, by the use of his confession, he is deprived of liberty or life through tyrannical or oppressive means. Officers of the law must realize that if they indulge in such practices they may, in the end, defeat rather than further the ends of justice. Their lawless practices here took them close to the line. But on the facts as we have endeavored fairly to set them forth, and in the light of the findings in the State courts, we cannot hold that the illegal conduct in which the law enforcement officers of California indulged by the prolonged questioning of the prisoner before arraignment, and in the absence of counsel, or their questioning on May 2, coerced the confessions, the introduction of which is the infringement of due process of which the petitioner complains. The petitioner has said that the interrogation would never have drawn an admission from him had his confederate not made a statement; he admits that no threats, promises, or acts of physical violence were offered him during this questioning or for eleven days preceding it. Counsel had been afforded full opportunity to see him and had advised him. He exhibited a self-possession, a coolness, and an acumen throughout his questioning, and at his trial, which negatives the view that he had so lost his freedom of action that the statements made were not his but were the result of the deprivation of his free choice to admit, to deny, or to refuse to answer.

The judgments are affirmed.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

No. 4.—October Term, 1941.

Major Raymond Lisenba, Petitioner, vs. The People of the State of California } On Writ of Certiorari to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

[December 8, 1941.]

Mr. Justice Black, dissenting, with whom Mr. Justice Douglas concurs.

I believe the confession used to convict James was the result of coercion and compulsion, and that the judgment should be reversed for that reason. The testimony of the officers to whom the confession was given is enough, standing alone, to convince me that it could not have been free and voluntary. Cf. Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532. In brief, those officers admitted the following:

Suspecting the defendant of murder they entered his home on Sunday, April 19, 1936, at 9 a. m. He was taken to a furnished house next door, in which the State's Attorney's office had installed a dictaphone. For the next forty-eight hours, or a little longer, the State's Attorney, his assistants, and investigators held James as their prisoner. He was so held not under indictment or warrant of arrest but by force. At about 4 a. m. Monday, one Southard, an investigator, "slapped" the defendant whose left ear was thereafter red and swollen. James was apparently kept at the State's Attorney's office during the daylight hours; the full extent to which he was questioned there is not clear. But on Monday and Tuesday nights, at the furnished house, with no one present but James and the officers, he was subjected to constant interrogation. The questioning officers divided themselves into squads, so that some could sleep while the others continued the questioning. The defendant got no sleep during the first forty-two hours after the officers seized him. And about 3:30 or 4 a. m. Tuesday morning, while sitting in the chair he occupied while being interrogated, at the very moment a question was being asked him, the defendant fell asleep. There he remained asleep until about 7 or 8 a. m. At about 11 a. m. the officers took him to jail and booked him on a charge of incest. During the entire forty-two hours defendant was held, he repeatedly denied any complicity in or knowledge of the murder of his wife.

The second episode during which the officers held defendant incommunicado, and which produced the confession, was on May 2 and in the early hours of May 3. About 11 a. m. on May 2 an investigator for the District Attorney took James from his cell to the chaplain's room of the jail. In the presence of an Assistant District Attorney he was confronted by Hope and told that Hope had made a confession implicating James in his wife's murder. James refused to talk and was then carried back to his cell. A short time later, under a purported order of court, the nature or authority of which does not appear, James was taken from the jail to his home, and then somewhere between 1 and 4 p. m. to the District Attorney's office. The doors were locked. From then until about midnight the District Attorney, his Assistants, and investigators, subjected James to constant interrogation. Upon asking for his attorney, James was told he was out of the city. He then asked for another but whatever efforts the officers made to satisfy this request were unsuccessful. He was again confronted with Hope but neither this nor the questioning had elicited an admission of any nature by midnight. At that time, according to the investigators, James said to one of them, "Can't we go out and get something to eat—if you fellows will take me out to eat now, I will tell you the story."[1] He was taken out to eat by some of the officers, remained about an hour and a half, while at the restaurant made damaging admissions, and upon his return to the District Attorney's office, made the full statement which was used to bring about his conviction, completing it at about 3 a. m. Southard, the investigator who had previously "slapped" him, was one of the signed witnesses of the confession.[2]

[1] This is rather close to a part of James' own testimony, to wit: "He continued to question me until later on in the evening. I was very sick. I was hungry; I was tired, and I told him a thousand times that I didn't know anything about Hope's story."

[2] James' testimony at this point was that Southard, left alone with him shortly before midnight, said James had been lying to the District Attorney long enough and threatened to take him back once again to the house next door to his home where James had been questioned April 19 to 21. In response to an inquiry whether he was told his confession might be used against him, James replied: "I didn't know whether the statement would be used against me, or not. I would rather die than to have gone back to that house and went through torture like the three days I was out there. I didn't care whether the statement was taken, or not."

I think the facts set out are sufficient to make applicable the principles announced in Chambers v. Florida, 308 U. S. 227, and the conclusion there announced that: "Due process of law, preserved for all by our Constitution, commands that no such practice as that disclosed by this record shall send any accused to his death." White v. Texas, 310 U. S. 530, 533; Canty v. Alabama, 309 U. S. 629; Vernon v. Alabama, 313 U. S. 547. Cf. Bram v. United States, supra.
